DORAN STREET PROTESTS ASSESSMENT FOR OPENING OF PATTERSON AVENUE

Declare It Would Remove Traffic From Doran Street and Militate Against Property Values in That Section of the City

ASSISTANT CITY ENGINEER STONE EXPLAINS

Citizens Vote Resolutions Against the Work and Decide to Send a Committee to the City Council to Investigate Details

About seventy Doran street property owners, practically all of whom had blood in their eyes, gathered at the Columbus avenue school building last night to protest against two things, namely, the opening of Patterson avenue from Brand boulevard to San Fernando road, and also against assisting to pay for that opening, providing the work does go through. When it was stated to them that the proceedings for the opening of Patterson had been abandoned by the city council at its last session, the meeting continued to protest against one thing and another, just to make it unanimous. After the fireworks, those present took a collection, sang the doxology, and patted each other on the back.

KIWANIS CLUB STARTS UNIT AT SANTA BARBARA

Last Week, Organization
Attended Opening At Alhambra

Fifteen members of the local Kiwanis club, headed by President Lyman P. Clark, went to Santa Barbara Thursday and organized a Kiwanis club, with a membership of 61 as a starter. Today, the same members, headed by President Clark, went to Santa Barbara and will assist in the organization of a club there. The Alhambra club voted unanimously that Glendale had the best bunch of boosters they had ever seen.

OWNER CLAIMS HIS RENTED FORD

M. W. Cornitus of 845 South Olive street, Los Angeles, appeared at the Glendale police department yesterday afternoon and put in his claim for the Ford automobile that was picked up on one of the Glendale streets a day or so ago, and which was taken to the McGrath & Hunter garage.

SPEED POLICEMAN INJURED ON JOB

While chasing a speeder on the San Fernando boulevard Monday night, the motorcycle operated by Officer Dice, blew a tire, the mishap resulting in Dice being thrown to the road and his back badly sprained. At this time he is confined to his home, but it is believed that he will be on the job again within a week.

HOW ABOUT THIS?

Surely there is no excuse for being without that home you have wanted for so long. Following is one of the many bargains you will find on the Press classified ad page today.

LESS THAN IT COST TO BUILD

Splendid 5-room modern bungalow, close in on Patterson avenue, deep lot; only $5800—$7500 down. Might take $5000 down.

We Would All Do Something Else Somewhere Else

What we want is always some place else, and we would always be somewhere else to find happiness and new things of interest. At least Dr. Frank Crane this evening in his exceedingly interesting article in discussing this dissatisfied spirit exhibited by man, says so. "We are creatures of imagination and almost all of our fun comes from the imagination and we have a way of tramping actually under foot," asserts the doctor during the course of his discussion.

It is useless to try to wipe out the things that have been done in the past. The thing to do is to start afresh and make a good clean record, one to be proud of. This will efface the record of the past.

James W. Foley in "The Listening Post" this evening, speaks along these lines, and in his wise philosophical way builds a lasting lesson on the man who tried to rub the engraved marks from the face of a tablet with a sponge and his tears. Atonement and achievement are worth while, and Mr. Foley tells of three tablets, the first marking the man's shame, the second telling of his success, and the third place by the philosopher bearing the inscription "Through error by courage to achievement."

There are other equally interesting paragraphs and articles on the editorial page this evening for your edification, and it will be well worth your while to read it. It is filled with a wealth of information.

HOTEL PROJECT CONTRACTORS IN CITY

Arranging for Sand and Gravel Supply
Locally

The constructional contractors who will do the work on the new Glendale hotel, corner Glendale avenue and Broadway, were in Glendale this morning for the purpose of arranging the necessary contracts for the furnishing of sand and gravel to be used in the hotel. It is understood that this material will be secured entirely from local firms, and will be taken from the wash in the northern part of the city. Judge Ross, from whose port of the wash the sand and gravel will be taken, has agreed to take stock in the hotel company to the extent of all his return from the sand taken that is used in the building. This will amount to a great deal, inasmuch as the building will be made, as far as possible, of concrete and steel.

Accompanying these construction contractors were Mr. Treman, who is putting up the building, and his advisor, Mr. Whitney, who has assisted in carrying this hotel proposition to a successful conclusion. Mr. Treman has signed with the constructional people in Los Angeles, so that at this time everything is rushing along as rapidly as possible.

It is expected that everything will be in readiness for the starting of escrow by tomorrow. The title has already been searched and found to be satisfactory in every detail.

Mrs. Mabel L. Tight, who has been, probably, the most active worker in the securing of this hotel for Glendale, stated this morning that, if the people who have subscribed to this hotel proposition will keep their pledges, the entire amount required will be collected, but, to take care of any possible shrinkage, a few additional pledges are being secured from those desiring to have a hand in the proposition.

VAN TASSEL IS PROVED INNOCENT

The case of Lee vs. Von Tassel, which was tried in Judge Lowe's court yesterday, resulted in a dismissal of the case on account of lack of evidence.

Lee claimed that Von Tassel, while in an intoxicated condition, drove into his machine while he was driving through La Canada a short time ago. The Von Tassel who was on trial, it developed, was not the man who was driving the machine at the time of the accident. The defendant furnished proof that he was not intoxicated when the collision occurred. The witness for the plaintiff did not appear, and the case was dismissed.

Buy All You Can Tomorrow

With this issue of the Glendale Daily Press comes the biggest opportunity of the season for the wise citizen of Glendale to buy those things he needs.

Everywhere in these pages will be found advertisements of the live merchants of Glendale, concentrated to offering goods to meet all purses, at the lowest price of the year.

In times of strife and uncertainty, the chance to obtain what is actually needed is sought for eagerly and grasped.

Such a chance is offered to the people of Glendale tomorrow by the merchants of Glendale who have aligned for the Dollar Day program.

A week hence these goods may be unobtainable at any price.

Transportation may be suspended. Federal troops may be operating the freight trains. No one knows. Not even the president of the United States.

The interstate commerce commission has declared a national emergency exists.

A national emergency is a personal emergency to every household in the country. Every part of the country will be absorbing the goods that is now offered at the lowest price of the year, in the advertising columns of the Glendale Daily Press.

If transportation breaks down, even temporarily, these goods will not be obtainable at any price, unless they reach this city by water and motor truck transportation. And such transportation is not able to handle great volume.

So, the Glendale Daily Press, not alone on the behalf of the merchants of the city who have joined with the Credit Men's association in making tomorrow's clearance the greatest sale in the history of Glendale, but on your behalf, urges you to buy the things you need now, before any advantage is taken of you in the present national emergency.

We speak for our advertisers because they have offered in good faith goods that might well be held on the gambling chance of an advancing market, because the Credit Men's association has named tomorrow for this city-wide offering to you. The opportunity is all yours tomorrow. The day after, merchandising on futures may begin among the jobbers and the local merchant may not be able to restrain a serious advance.

POWER IMPLEMENT SCHOOL BOARD AND MACHINERY LEASES OFFICES CO. WINS ON BRAND

Accomplishes Financing of Plant on San Fernando Road

Representatives of the Power, Implement & Machinery company, who came to Glendale about four months ago with a proposition to move their plant from Modesto to this city, have at last accomplished the financing of the project by the sale of stock sufficient for present needs and will very soon begin building on the acre they have secured at Colorado and San Fernando road. It is expected that the plant can be completed in about ninety days and be ready for operation.

MACHINES TANGLE ON HIGHWAYS

Three accidents were filed with the Glendale police yesterday. While they proved hard on the pocketbook, they made the garage man smile.

R. Dearborn of 6417 Mason drive, Hyde Park, while traveling through Glendale, stopped long enough to tangle horns with J. Sato, Japanese, with the result that, after the shindig, the Jap was a little the worse for wear. He was taken to the Glendale sanitarium, where his bruises were attended to. The Ford garage towed in his fivver.

Cars operated by B. C. Morrison of La Canada and R. M. Boss of 438 West Arden avenue, came together on Brand, near Broadway, at 4:15 yesterday afternoon. Mr. Boss, it is stated, backed his truck from the curb just in time to catch Morrison, who was driving by.

Gus W. Hologate of 146 South San Fernando road, was driver of a machine that collided with a car driven by an unknown person, the accident taking place on Colorado street last night. Damage to the extent of $10 was done.

HARDING IS NOT AGAINST BONUS

OMAHA, July 26.—President Harding did not make the statement that he would veto any kind of bonus legislation for world war veterans, according to a telegram received today by Douglas county post, American Legion, from Geo. Christian, the president's secretary.

Newspapers Sunday carried reports that the president would veto any bonus bill passed by congress.

"Statement unauthorized," Christian's telegram said. "President not opposed to bonus legislation and never said he would veto it."

Walt Mason of Emporia Gazette Is Perturbed

LA JOLLA, Cal., July 26.—Walt Mason, Kansas bard and former laureate of the Emporia Gazette, is so obsessed with the friendship of his former employer, the editor, with Governor Allen, that when asked to comment on their recent differences, he could not even recall their proper names. "Uncle Walt" thought for some time over the matter, and then as an old citizen of Emporia and a friend of both men, he wrote the following explanation of the controversy for the United Press:

By WALT MASON
(Written for the United Press)
William A. Allen and Henry J. White are such intimate friends that their front names frequently are transposed. Ever since their university days they have been known as the two orphans, Damon and Pythias or David and Jonathan.

It is impossible for one who knows them to imagine any serious personal differences that would call for rough on rats or shotguns at twenty paces, yes when either man has a conviction he is likely to ride it to death and would cheerfully sacrifice his aunts for the cause.

Now it seems that these men who went to France together and put an end to the war because it had become a chestnut, have inaugurated a oneering war of their own, but knowing them as I do, I am sure they embrace and set up the soft drinks between rounds.

And I am sure that either would rather be right than be president or editor of Kansas or governor of the Emporia Gazette.

HIGH BOND MASS MEETING SET FOR AUG. 10

To Consider Financing of New Plant; New Teachers Elected

At the meeting of high school trustees Tuesday evening, a decision was reached to call another mass meeting to discuss the proposed additional bond issue for high school purposes, August 10, instead of August 8, the date originally considered.

The board granted leaves of absence to two teachers, Mrs. Daisy Wilson, study room teacher of the past year, and Miss Hilda Smith, of the English department, who wishes a year's leave to travel abroad. To fill her place, Miss Mary Riggs was elected. She is considered especially well fitted by early environment, having been born in the Lake country of England, famous as the birthplace of the poets Wordsworth, Southey and Coleridge. She went to school in a building which had once been owned by Coleridge, and was graduated from St. Andrews' college of Scotland. She taught several years in Canada and several years in Michigan and Wisconsin, and came to California with her parents, who decided to remain here and persuaded her to do likewise.

Miss Mary G. Corry was also elected. She was graduated from the university of California with a master's degree. Her assignment will be the departments of English and public speaking. She was at the head of the English department in the Madeira high school last year.

Mrs. Fannie Ford Sloan, who has recently come to Glendale to live, was elected and will be assigned to work in biology and general science. Science was her major in New Mexico agricultural college, from which she was graduated, and she is said to be the best authority in the country on the birds of Arizona and New Mexico.

Miss C. Evelyn Haney, a graduate of the University of California, was elected for work in the Latin department. She comes highly recommended by the state university and with fine letters of recommendation from Watsonville, where she taught last year.

Miss Hobush, who has been at the head of the advanced millinery department for several years, and is not expecting to return from Paris until November 1, will have a substitute for two months in Mrs. Verna Holloway Downing, who, it will be remembered, was head of the department for several years.

After this business was completed the board devoted the balance of the session to a discussion of the high school situation in general.

ly recommended. He is a graduate of a finger print college in New York, and has had considerable practical experience in the work. While not employed in finger print and photographic work, he will serve as daytime desk sergeant.

OUTFALL CONNECTION FOR SEWER NOT PROVIDED BY LOS ANGELES FOR GLENDALE

Councilman Crisswell Declares Promised Connection
Has Been Eliminated From Plans for Purposes of Economy in $12,000,000 System

COUNTY HEALTH OFFICER DISCUSSES PLAN

Annexation, It Is Said, Would Not Give Outlet for
At Least Four Years, Even If Consolidation
Was Effected At Once

The conference at the chamber of commerce between members of the Federation of Improvement associations and Los Angeles county and city officials proved extremely interesting and developed a good deal of intelligent discussion of sewer problems as applied to Glendale. Dr. Jessie Russell presided and addresses were made by Dr. Pomeroy, county health officer, and Ralph Criswell, president of the Los Angeles city council.

The Foothill Improvement association was represented by Alexander Mitchell, Nathan Newby, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Botsford, and Mrs. Buckman. Representing the East Glendale Advancement association were Charles Ingledue and Mrs. Mabel Tight. From the Verdugo Woodland association came J. R. Bolen, president, and Mrs. Butler, secretary; also George Mason, W. B. Griffin, president of San Fernando Road Improvement association, and there and also several members of the chamber of commerce, W. S. Rattray, A. R. Hill, Mr. Johnson and Thos. D. Watson were present.

Dr. Pomeroy made the first address in which he set forth the disadvantages from a sanitary viewpoint and as a public nuisance of the septic tank and Imhoff tank systems where nitrification takes place and the fermentation that follows exposure to the oxygen of the air creates unpleasant gases. The effluent, he stated, carries large quantities of bacteria and could not safely be used for irrigation purposes.

In the activated sludge system, on the contrary, 95 percent of the bacteria is destroyed, he said, and the effluent is so pure that it prevents the noxious odors, and therefore does away with objectionable features which would make it a nuisance.

Mr. Criswell told of the $12,000,000 sewer projects for which Los Angeles is asking its citizens to vote bonds August 12. He said that the original proposition made provision for connections with Glendale and outside towns, but that for purposes of economy that had been cut out.

In answer to questions by Mr. Mason, he admitted it would be at least four years before Glendale could realize any benefits from the Los Angeles system, provided the bonds are voted, even though it were annexed now. He urged that Glendale begin building its system now so it would be prepared to cooperate within four or five years.

Mr. Criswell also endorsed a suggestion made by Dr. Pomeroy, that subdividers of tracts be required to lay sewer laterals and mains according to city specifications just as they are required to lay water pipes and thus save the tearing up of streets and the delay in getting sewers.

In answer to an inquiry as to whether it would be possible for Glendale to co-operate with Los Angeles without political annexation, he said he was not prepared to say, having no authority; that he could not hold out any such promise.

It appeared to be the sense of the meeting and the advice of the speakers that Glendale and its sister communities should get together to work out some plan for the common good.

Dr. Pomeroy mentioned the law, which requires municipalities to provide for the disposal of sewage.

SPECIAL SALE ON NEW TYPE OF BATTERIES

Sales and Service Station Of Burbank Handles Willard Battery

Low cost battery service—the very thing that every autoist is interested in. A local battery expert says three things are necessary—start with a standard make of battery, service it properly with frequent and regular testing and filling, guard against overheating, due to overcharging.

Willard Storage Battery company of Cleveland, long ago realizing the need for a high-grade product and careful attention to that product, established a service station organization whose motto, "Through Service We Grow," has made them the largest company of its kind today.

The Willard batteries are handled in Burbank by the Sales and Service Station, 221 North Orange Grove avenue, of which J. C. Null is proprietor. A special sale on a new type of batteries is now being held by the local firm.

WATCH YOUR CAR FOR SIGN OF TROUBLE

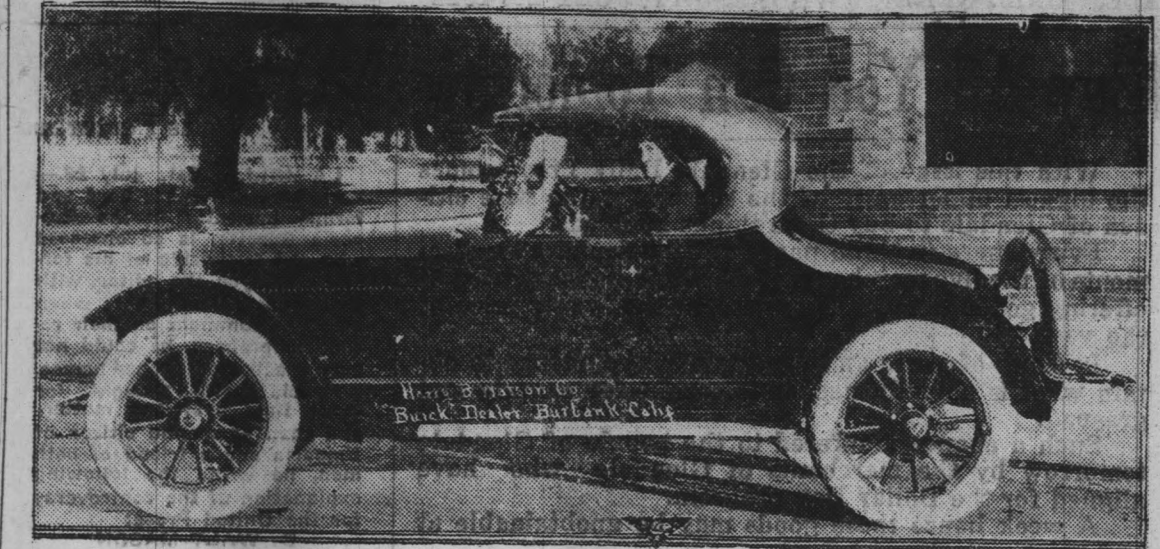

He Who Puts Off Repairs Is Going to Be Sorry Says Garage Man

"The motorist who habitually puts off needed repairs until just before he is ready to start the first trip in the spring, had better watch his step this year," says "Smiling" Charlie Lovejoy, proprietor of the Lovejoy Garage, corner San Fernando and Angeleno, Burbank.

"Statistics show so many cars in use that if they all follow the usual custom of jamming the repair shops with rush work, it will probably take three weeks to get a spark plug cleaned."

"Repair it now," is the slogan that repairmen and accessory dealers are impressing on motorists all over the country. "Repair it now" is a mighty wise thing to do, for now you can get through prompt service. Rush work is seldom satisfactory and cautious motorists aren't taking any chances on delays or poor workmanship.

OFFER VERY BEST WHEN SPARE TIRE BATTERY FOR THE PRICE BLOWS OWNER SWEARS TO UNDERMINE BATTERY

Westinghouse New Model Is Filling Demand of Motorists

"Lowest priced good battery you can buy."

The foregoing short description of the new battery manufactured by the Westinghouse Union Battery company is a good manner in which to describe the battery in question.

The price of this battery is only $19.50 and may be purchased in Burbank at the Westinghouse Battery Service, 223 North Orange Grove avenue.

The battery, which has a hard rubber case and with built-in cell apartments, has full 85 ampere hours' capacity. It is not an assembled battery, but built from high-grade materials by one of the foremost battery manufacturers in the country.

This battery is being made to satisfy the increasing demands by motorists for a low-priced, yet serviceable battery which is built by the Westinghouse people. The rubber cases are practically indestructible, acid having no effect on the cases, which lasts the life of the batteries.

COLE ALIGNS WITH CHAS. C. MOORE FOR SENATOR

LOS ANGELES, July 26.—Cornelius Cole, California's "grand old man," tower of strength for Abraham Lincoln in the trying days of the Civil war, advocate of justice and mercy for the defeated in the reconstruction period, and guiding hand in the opening negotiations, which later resulted in the purchase of Alaska from Russia, has announced his decided preference for Charles C. Moore as United States senator for California.

Senator Cole, who represented California in the upper house of congress with distinction, and who has always been a stalwart republican, has just returned from Washington. There he was given an ovation by those who are his successors as the nation's legislators. He discussed important measures with leading citizens, and came back to California with a clear idea of the needs of the state and its place in the affairs of the nation.

"I hope that Charles C. Moore will be elected United States senator," I am emphatically opposed to the re-election of Senator Johnson. I have just returned from Washington, where I found that among the republicans Johnson has but little influence. They look upon him as having sold out the republicans to the democrats, both in 1912 and 1916, and also as being an obstructionist. His actions toward President Harding and Secretaries Hoover and Hughes by opposing them in the way he has, have condemned him there, as they should here.

"Mr. Moore's idea is to get behind these men in the interest of the country. While, on the other hand, it is no secret that Senator Johnson has been working all of the time in his own and personal interests, and for this reason he sold out the party to the democrats in the Hughes campaign."

"Senator Shortridge has all of the influence of a faithful republican in Washington, and if we are able to obtain constructive national legislation for California, we must send another faithful republican to the senate, who will cooperate with the administration and with the present junior senator. This is not my personal opinion alone, but it is likewise the opinion of the republicans that I came in contact with while on my eastern trip. We have lost a great deal of our political prestige in the east, because of the bad political odor that Johnson has given the state. They have not forgiven us for having defeated Mr. Hughes. If we wish to retrieve ourselves, and regain the good will that was formerly ours throughout the eastern part of the country, and which we have lost in a large measure because of the actions of Johnson, we can only do so by defeating Senator Johnson.

"There is no special reason why

Protect Extra Casing or You May Regret It in Time

Any kind of a blowout is aggravating to the motorist, but when that blowout happens to the idle spare tire carried on the side of the car or behind, it is a downright calamity. And it is often quite perplexing because the driver cannot see exactly how it could have happened.

"Yet it's not so surprising an occurrence after all," said Ben, proprietor of Ben's Garage, who handles the Horseshoe and Convoy tires, which recently took a decided drop in price, "when you consider the treatment so commonly accorded the spare tire. A blowout never happens without some good reason."

"It may be that the spare is an old tire that has been patched up with the idea that the few more miles it may be good for will come in handy when an emergency finds the car nearer its destination than a service station. But as luck will have it the emergency never comes, exposure to sun and weather saps the little remaining vitality of the casing, and one day when it's unusually warm it just naturally goes flooie and gives up the ghost."

"There are two good remedies for this situation. First, never carry a badly worn tire as a spare. Either throw it away altogether or, if it is worth it, have it renewed. And the next thing to remember is to keep the spare protected by a cover at all times, as well as properly inflated. This cover protection is to shield it from the deteriorating effects of sunlight, water and oil, the same enemies that confront the casing in steady use on the wheel."

"The good spare tire may be considered in the light of insurance. But a rotten tire is no insurance at all—just a botheration. It certainly pays the motorist to keep a new casing in the spare rack for the emergency. And two new ones are still better."

he, Senator Johnson, should not have supported the various tariff measures, which had their origin in Congressmen Lineberger, Osborne, Kahn and other congressmen, as well as Senator Shortridge. As a California senator, Johnson could not have reasonably done otherwise than support these measures, and he does not deserve credit for having done so. The credit belongs to these gentlemen who originated them.

"Mr. Moore is a man possessed of constructive business and humanitarian ideas. They need such men in Washington as a sort of balance wheel, men who have done things successfully in a business way, as Mr. Moore has done. This is what made Mr. Hoover so great throughout the country and respected the world over. The election of Mr. Moore at this time would also add to the popularity of California, as many people, both in public and private life, as well as the business world, are watching this state and its future. Much of our future success will depend upon national legislation. We cannot secure it at the hands of a senator who is opposed to his party and the administration. On this account, primarily, and because of the great ability and the strong, helpful personality of Mr. Moore, I believe we republicans ought to elect him and thus speak to the people of the east in unmistakable terms the emphatic denunciation of the tactics of Senator Johnson and his obstructionist associates."

"TWOULD BE EXTREMELY STYLISH, WHAT? The Junior Yegg—Wot's de nighty for?"

The Senior Yegg—Sh! Put it on. Den w'en de guy wakes up an' sees you friskin' his clothes he'll tink you're his wife.

SORT O' MALICIOUS Young Lady (to literary critic)—My brother is coming up to see you tomorrow night and read a drama he has just written. Critic—I thank you for the warning.

SOME SLEUTH Small Boy—Say, mister, yer car was just stolen. Car Owner—Well, why didn't you call the police to stop the thieves? Small Boy—I didn't think of that, but it's all right. I've got the number of the car.

Pointers by Ben, Who Knows How, Why and Wherefore

Many conditions conspire to undermine the long life and usefulness of a storage battery and try its toughness and ability to withstand abuse.

Hard, fast driving over rough roads or through mud or dust gives a battery punishment that will shorten its period of service, while neglect, caused by infrequent testing and lack of water, are equally as hard on the cells.

"Other causes of battery failure before the normal period of its life is up," according to Ben, proprietor of Ben's Garage, who handles the Hobbs storage battery in Burbank, "include long driving, much starting and stopping, cold weather, hot weather, and excessive use of lights. Many motorists install electrical devices beyond the rated capacity of the battery without realizing that they consume energy."

TIRES GO FARTHER THAN OWNER THINKS

Speedometer Not Always Faithful Guide, Says Tire Co. Manager

"You can't tell how many miles a tire goes by the speedometer score," is the latest saying of a motordom. "The reason you can't is very obvious," according to Manager Martin Longo of the Akron Tire Repair company, 131 San Fernando boulevard, Burbank.

"If you'll stop to think there is a lot of tire travel that the speedometer doesn't register," he says. "For instance, when you back up, when you skid with your rear wheels locked, and when you have one wheel out of line that skews along the road like a bootlegger's victim in tow of the law."

"Speaking of poor wheel alignment, I'll wager not a day of your motoring existence passes but what you see some car ambling along the street or highway with a drunken wheel or two. If you have an abundant sense of humor, you can easily get a laugh out of the cars so afflicted, especially if it is piloted by one of those absent-minded drivers who sit up still and straight and let the world go hang."

"But it is really a serious matter—for the pocketbook anyway. When the wheel wobbles, so does the tire. And that means that it covers a lot more territory than there is any need of and scrubs off some tread besides. Then when its all over, but digging down into the jeans for the purchase price of a new tire, maybe the car owner wonders why he failed to get as much mileage out of one casing as he did out of another. It is a safe policy to test the wheel alignment of the car that has seen considerable service. You may find out things that will save you money."

DO YOU KNOW WHAT SERVICE REALLY MEANS?

"Nick" Sells This Commodity With All His Goods

The word "service" nowadays is used very extensively and undoubtedly in most cases where it is used one wonders what the word really means, and in such cases it is usually wrongly applied.

However, it remains for A. S. Nicholson, proprietor of Nicholson's Garage, 401 San Fernando boulevard, Burbank, to carry out in actual performance the true meaning of this much used word. "His interpretation of the word 'service' means the application with speed and efficiency of all new tires; make deliveries promptly,

AUTO DEALER IS COMING BACK INTO OWN

Report Made to Harry B. Watson Company, Inc., Buick Distributors

The record of sales of automobiles of practically all makes since January 1, 1922, certainly shows that the automobile dealer is coming into his own after two years of depression, according to a report received by Harry B. Watson company of Burbank, distributors of the Buick in the San Fernando Valley.

The report, which was made by the General Motors acceptance corporation of San Francisco, follows: "The record of sales of automobiles of practically all makes since January 1, 1922, certainly show that the automobile dealer is coming into his own after two years of depression. It is also a fact that the buying power today is, as a whole, of a more substantial nature than for several years past."

"With these facts in mind we believe you will agree with us in the opinion that you are now in a position to make a good profit on your investment, providing you take the proper care in the selection of your time purchasers. You, in all probability, figure the profit you have made during the month, each month, based on the sales made. If so, here is food for thought."

"Assuming you sell 50 cars or more at a net profit of $50 per car. This, on your statement for the month's business, would show a net profit of $2500. Now suppose 25 cars out of the 50 are sold on the deferred payment plan of 12 equal monthly installments. Do you realize that $1250 of your profit is not a real profit until July, 1923, or 12 months after the sale is made? For your own protection and from a profit standpoint to you, we cannot urge too strongly your thorough investigation of every time purchaser before you advise him you are willing to wait 12 months for your profit, which it amounts to when you approve the deal."

"As soon as the prospective purchaser tells you he wants to buy on time he is selling you something and that is his credit standing. While you are endeavoring to sell him the car, he does not hesitate to take up your time to ask you innumerable questions as to its merits. When he has been sold and asks you to deliver the car to him on the deferred payment plan, why should you not ask him questions so as to satisfy yourself that your paper profit will become real? Many dealers take the stand, without giving the matter thought, that the purchaser objects to questions regarding his income; he manner in which he expects to pay for the car and other inquiries of the same nature, yet if this purchaser was to go to his bank to borrow the funds in order to pay cash for the car they would ask him the same questions in order to satisfy themselves as to his ability."

WOMEN LIKE THE CHANGE FROM OLD GEARSHIFT

C. E. Hough, Chevrolet Distributor, Speaks of New Shift

"Women motorists, more than men, appreciate the change from old-fashioned quadrant, gearshift to the modern 'X' index," said C. E. Hough, Burbank Chevrolet agent, First National bank annex, today. "The easier shifting with such a system and a center control rod located directly over and connected with the internal shifting gears, makes for much more pleasure in driving."

"Accessibility of 'choker' located on the steering column, rather than on the dash and almost out of reach, is another item women folk like, while the center effect of the steering spindle that makes steering semi-automatic and greatly relieves strain on the arms, is also an item of importance."

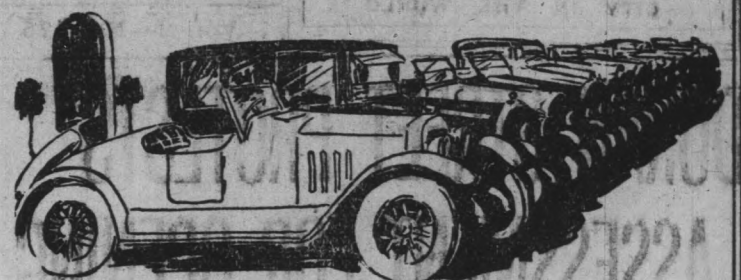

"Gear shifting always has been a bug-a-bear to women drivers, but in the case of today's gears can be shifted while negotiating a hill upward or downward without fighting them, and can be changed from one speed to another under all conditions without going through a third speed."

"Another detail worthy of notice, and which, I believe, is an exclusive feature, is the accessibility of the side curtains; the fact that they are always kept flat and safe from being broken or torn, while at the same time ever ready to be attached easily if it starts to rain, or if a hard wind should come up while on a long motor trip."

"Easy tire changing, a tow set spare tire rack and extremely flexible throttle control are all features that appeal with special force to the woman motorist."

Mr. Hough, after a long wait, has just received a new shipment of the fast-selling Chevrolet, and from indications the same will last but a short time, so the thing to do is to buy it now.

NELLIE WARNER IS HONORED BY FRIENDS

Entertainment Is Under Auspices of C. of C. and Business Women

The party given at the chamber of commerce under the joint auspices of the chamber of commerce and Business and Professional Women's club, in honor of Miss Nellie Warner, soon to become the bride of Fred Hoffman, proved a delightful social affair, enjoyed by about 100 members of the organizations and friends of the honoree. It was essentially informal, but guests were met in the corridor by Mrs. Cora Ayers and Sidney Bell and introduced to other of the hostesses and to the members of the receiving line, headed by Mr. and Mrs. V. M. Hollister, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Newton, and David Gregg, representing the chamber of commerce; Dr. Laura Brown, president of the Business Women's club, Miss Sara Pollard, Mrs. B. M. Warner, and the guest of honor. Also assisting in the entertainment of guests were Secretary and Mrs. James M. Rhoades, and Assistant Secretary and Mrs. E. F. Sanders. At the punch tables were Dr. Caroline P. Jackson, chairman of house committee of the club, and members of her committee, and Mrs. Elsie Williams, chairman of the hostess committee, with assisting members.

At the gift table, where the beautiful set of silver given by directors of the chamber of commerce, the handsome linen, the gift of the Business Women's club, and other presents, were placed, was Mrs. Mary Baxter, also a clubwoman, and chairman of the membership committee. A brief but altogether delightful program was given, Miss Elizabeth Mottern singing most beautifully, "La Serenata" (Tosti), and "Pansies," by Ralph Cox, playing her own piano accompaniment. Miss Mottern was absent in New York all last winter, and it was a great treat to hear her again and note the advance she had made since she was a girl. Both are lovely bridal songs, however, and delighted the audience. Mrs. Freeman has a studio, where she receives pupils, at the home she and Mr. Freeman recently purchased at 316 West Dryden street.

The comedy number of the program was provided by Miss Ethel Preston, and proved a variation of the "Mrs. Jarley" show. She explained that the club was anxious to give Miss Warner a practical gift, something she would be able to use wherever she might go, even in districts where electricity would not be available, and, therefore, it was presenting her with an automatic housekeeping machine. She thereupon produced properties in the shapes of a washtub and board, table and ironing board, and propelled lay figures which she would up with an egg beater. As they ran down, she renewed their energy by rewinding. Dr. Maybelle Tinkled assisted at the washtub, Mrs. Anderson at the ironing board, Mrs. Baxter with the mop, and Miss Pollard with patient parer. All filled their parts with amusing similitude to the dummies they were supposed to be, and the little act caused great merriment. Drinking of punch and the tendering of congratulations to Miss Warner, completed the pleasant evening.

THE MISSES BELLUE HONOR HOUSE GUEST

The Misses Stella and Emily Bellue of 352 Myrtle street entertained Monday evening in honor of Miss Lenore Van Horn, who has been the house guest for the past six months of her aunt, Mrs. Clifford Childs, 345 Myrtle street, and who returns to folks' home in Portland, Ore., next Thursday. The evening was spent in games, after which refreshments were served. Guests included the Misses Fay Butler, Nellie Butler, Ruth James, Esther James, Florence James, Emily and Stella Bellue and the honoree, Miss Van Horn, whom the girls all wished a safe and pleasant journey, and all hoped she would return in the near future to live in Glendale.

CHARMING EVENING AT NORTH KENWOOD HOME
Miss Dorothea Vogel and her aunt, Mrs. Elizabeth Bray, entertained last night with a charming dancing party at their home, 408 North Kenwood street. The house was a bower of many varieties of spring flowers and greenery, and following an enjoyable evening of games, music and dancing, a refreshment course was served. Fred Albright rendered several vocal solos. Guests numbered about 40.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Houdyshel of 208 North Orange street are entertaining their daughter, Mrs. M. B. Crowley of Susanville, Cal., and granddaughter, Mrs. Vincent Nielsen of Sacramento, and great granddaughter, Lois Nielsen. They arrived here Monday in order to attend the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Houdyshel on Saturday. They will possibly remain here for two weeks.

WOMEN'S CLUB GIVES ENJOYABLE DANCE

Is Held At the Auditorium of the Local School

LA CRESCENTA, July 26.—One of the most enjoyable events of the past week was the dancing party given by the La Crescenta Women's club, last Saturday evening, at the school auditorium, many of the club members having out-of-town guests for the occasion. These informal dances will be given every two weeks during the summer. The proceeds will be added to the building fund of the club. Mrs. M. S. Collins, Mrs. G. J. Teller and Mrs. Frank Turner presided over the punch bowl. The Shrine club orchestra of Glendale furnished the music.

BANKEE PLAN IS MAKING HEAD HERE

Many Local Merchants Adopt Idea of Aiding Thrift

Widespread merchants are constantly searching for new ways in which to serve their customers. They realize that by selling good merchandise at fair prices, backed up by thoughtful service, they cannot only satisfy old customers but attract new ones.

Increased business means better facilities for service and greater buying power. It is an endless chain which at all times benefits the consumer.

A number of local merchants have recently added to their already excellent service a new feature which they find is being welcomed by old and new customers alike.

They have adopted the Bankee plan of giving their customers a cash discount on all purchases. Under the Bankee plan, these merchants give one Bankee, a gummed coupon, with every 10 cents spent in their stores. With a purchase amounting to a dollar, ten Bankees are given.

The Bankees are pasted into a Bankee book, which all Bankee merchants are glad to supply. When the book is full, 500 stamps, it will be cashed for a dollar or credited as a dollar deposit in your savings account at the First National bank.

The plan is meeting the need for a system of cash discounts on retail purchases. It is winning favor with men and women in this and many other communities. Fathers and mothers are especially enthusiastic about Bankees because they are teaching the principles of thrift and saving to the children. Hundreds of books have already been turned into the local bank for cash, and many children and grownups, too, now have savings accounts which are rapidly growing.

WAR MEASURES IN TWIN STRIKES

Commerce Commission Takes Control of Rolling Stock

WASHINGTON, July 26.—War-time measures were in effect today as the interstate commerce commission holding that a national emergency exists, because of the twin railroad and coal strikes, assumed a sweeping control of railroad rolling stock and took over direction of the distribution of food, fuel and other necessities required to sustain the life of the nation. By declaring a national emergency, an unprecedented step in peace times, the commission has powers rivaling those exercised by the government when it took over the railroads during the war. The government today was building an emergency administration similar to the war-time foods and fuel which will aid the commission in carrying out its extraordinary powers.

The interstate commerce commission soon will send out appeals to the state public utilities asking that they keep a close watch on the railroad and coal situations and cooperate in the federal move to control the distribution of fuel and other necessary commodities and in expediting all freight shipments.

Among her out-of-town guests were Trelise Coffin, Jerome Eddy, Betty Blair, Olan and Frances Alhsweda, Horace Vedder, Joe Mather and James and Edward Ende. Little Miss Bissell was assisted by her mother, Mrs. H. S. Bissell, Mrs. T. S. Minford and Miss Eunice Bissell.

LA CRESCENTA PERSONALS

C. OF C. READY TO ENTERTAIN

C. of C. Secretaries and Commanders of K. P. Are Coming

Plans were laid at the meeting of the board of directors of the chamber of commerce yesterday noon for the reception and entertainment of the members of the Southern California Chamber of Commerce Secretaries association, which will gather in Glendale next Saturday. The secretaries will reach Glendale about 10:30 o'clock, when they will be met by automobiles and driven through the city, landing at Verdugo Woodlands at 12 o'clock, where a Spanish dinner will be served by the F. P. Newport company.

After the repast the business session of the association will be held at the Woodlands and at about 5:30 the visitors will be brought to Glendale and given a dinner at the chamber of commerce, following which there will be a literary and musical program. The idea is for Glendale to show the visitors the very best time possible.

Attorney King reported that a carload of grand commanders of the Knights of Pythias lodge will arrive in Glendale soon, en route for San Francisco, where they will attend the grand lodge. They will spend four days in Los Angeles and it is the desire to have some of them in Glendale during that time. The matter was referred to the entertainment committee.

The matter of providing a sign at the northern limits of Glendale was taken up, and it was decided to confer with the Burbank trustees to see if it would be possible to place the name "Glendale" on the Burbank side of the Burbank sign, so that to those approaching Glendale, the "Glendale" sign would be visible and by those approaching Burbank the word "Burbank" would be seen. Assistant Secretary Sanders was instructed to take the matter up with the proper Burbank authorities.

The board decided to accept the invitation of Director Dan Campbell to have the next meeting of the board at his home.

"The women folks are down at the beach," said Mr. Campbell, "and if you fellows want to come up to my place, I'll furnish the steaks, but you will have to make the coffee and wash the dishes."

The "fellows" were not long in accepting this invitation. The meeting and blowout will be held next Tuesday night at 8 o'clock, the chefs arriving a half hour earlier to prepare the feed.

NEW TEXAS LINEUP.

DALLAS, Tex., July 26.—Forces of Senator Culberson, defeated in Saturday's democratic primary, lined up behind former Governor James E. Ferguson today.

Judge Barry Miller, former for Senator Culberson, who finished third in the race, practically conceded Ferguson's place in the run-off primary to be held August 26, when he wired the former governor offering his support against E. B. Mayfield, who had the highest vote.

A REVISED BLESSING

Marjorie had been frequently reprimanded by her parents for her too great eagerness to begin her dinner before grace had been asked. On one such occasion her brother, upon whom devolved the duty of asking a blessing, thought he would add a line to cover his little sister's offense. So, closing his eyes, he said, solemnly, "For what we are about to receive, and for what Marjorie has already eaten, O Lord, make us truly thankful."—Boston Transcript.

A man was visiting Ireland for the first time.

In Dublin one warm afternoon, he suddenly put his handkerchief over his nose, and said in a choked voice: "What the deuce is that?"

"That," said his Irish guide, "why, that's the River Liffey. Didn't ye know, man, that the smell of the Liffey was one o' the sights of Dublin?"

THE KEY to Dollar Day

While "Dollar Day" in the sense that it will be applied in Glendale tomorrow, Thursday, July 27, is comparatively new here, it has nevertheless been celebrated, so to speak, in the east and middle-west for some years, in many of the larger little cities it is looked forward to as though it was a legal holiday, taxing their resources to accommodate the visitors from the nearby villages and surrounding country. The merchants and, in fact, everyone having wares for sale cooperate in giving the public as many and as great values for a dollar as they can afford—thus the name "Dollar Day."

Glendale merchants will probably celebrate "$ Day" from two to four times a year in the future. The bargains in different lines of merchandise that our customers may take advantage of will be many. For instance, here is a partial list of the wonderful values WILLIAMS DRY GOODS STORE has to offer you:

Gathered About Town

It is interesting to see how many of the tempting products displayed in the markets of Glendale come from our own San Fernando Valley. One of the most beautiful exhibits seen this morning was strawberries of enormous size, not a berry in the box that did not measure more than an inch and a half in diameter. Then there were crisp cucumbers from the big Davis plant on the edge of our city, muskmelons that are just coming in to supplant the Imperial Valley crop, and apricots in quantity, for these are the cheapest fruit now in market that can be used for canning and preserving, the retail price being in the neighborhood of 70 cents per lug box of 30 pounds.

BOY SCOUTS ARE HAVING TIME OF THEIR LIVES

Scout Executive Benner Sends Interesting Account of the Work

By H. F. BENNER
A letter from Scout Executive H. F. Benner, dated Howland's landing, Catalina island, July 24, gives an interesting account of recent activities of the scouts in their island camp. He writes: "You may tell the people of the Verdugo hills that the 1922 vacation camp is going over great. The scouts are having the time of their lives swimming, fishing, hiking and eating, and, believe me, they can surely make the grub disappear fast."

"The voyage over to Avalon was uneventful, a few of the boys getting slightly seasick. After allowing the scouts the run of Avalon for three hours, we boarded the 'Betty-O' and with cheers and shouts for most everyone on the dock, we started for the camp, which is located at Howland's landing. The boys went wild when they sighted the camp, and it was a great experience for them to board the small boats which took them from the 'Betty-O' to the shore. The scout leaders are pulling together in fine shape, and our camp leadership is certainly working harmoniously. Of course, we had to sit down on Mayor Robinson once or twice, but he will be quite a camper when we get through with him. He has fished every day since camp opened, and it is with a beaming smile he tells everybody in camp what wonderful fishing there is hereabouts. His total catch is one fish exactly 40 2/3 inches long."

"We have been doing everything to get our radio working, and yesterday were successful in hearing the Bible institute. If you will get in touch with Mr. Chandler I believe we will be able to receive your broadcasting very well. The boys are all anxious to hear the president of the council, and are looking forward to this event. "Yesterday morning we held one of the most simple and impressive church services I have ever attended. The service was conducted in the usual boy scout non-sectarian manner, and was only held for half an hour, but that half-hour was one that we will all remember for some time. "We have had no serious illness and no accidents thus far, and are taking every precaution to guard against illness and to make the camp a safe camp. "Will try and write another letter before we leave for home, but with a camp this size, and with something doing every minute of the day, it keeps me occupied. "We will listen in Thursday evening."

FINED FOR FIRES

Two offenders against the county and state fire ordinances had a hearing before Judge Owen Emery this morning on charges preferred by foresters of the district. One, Ira H. Vance of Tujunga, who started a fire without a permit, was fined $25, which he paid on the spot. The other was Joseph Kosta, a poor Mexican, who started a big fire without any protection and whose offense was considered more flagrant. He was fined $25 for violation of county ordinance and $50 for violation of state ordinance, and not being able to furnish the money, was given time in which to pay.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

DOROTHY MAY LAROCK
Dorothy May LaRock, 15-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Forest LaRock of 515 West Wilson avenue, passed away Tuesday afternoon at 1:20. Little Dorothy leaves a twin brother, Kenneth Irvin. She had been sick for the past two weeks, and had been at a hospital for ten days with whooping cough and double pneumonia. Besides her twin brother and parents, she leaves two aunts, Mrs. Ray Myer and Mrs. W. G. Boyd; two grandfathers, Riley Lyons and William LaRock, and an uncle, Riley Lyons, Jr. Mr. LaRock is from Los Angeles. Funeral services will be held from the parlors of the Jewel City Undertaking company at 10 a. m. Thursday. Interment will take place at Forest Lawn memorial park. Rev. W. E. Edmonds will be in charge.

The lack of money is the root of most worry.

Undeclared, He Takes 11 Sets Straight in Glendale Press Tournament

Roscoe Puffer, maintaining a record of undefeated playing, won first place and added the eleventh to his string of victories in the Glendale Daily Press tennis tournament yesterday on the high school grounds, by defeating M. Preeman, 6-2, 6-2; Phillips, 6-3, 6-2, and Woods, 6-0, 6-1.

If Preeman wins today, Preeman, Stanford and Wimmer are tied for second place and will require a run-off to win the cup put up by Puffer, Sr., for the second prize.

Wimmer has nine victories to his credit and two defeats, R. Stanford has eight victories and two defeats, while Preeman has won six matches and was defeated twice.

C. Letts has third place with six matches and three defeats.

The series does not end before August 3, so there is time yet for a sensational comeback.

In the play yesterday, Stanford defeated Wimmer, 6-2, 6-4, and Woods, 6-1, 9-7.

Preeman defeated Andrews, 6-1, 6-1.

Letts defeated Neuman, 6-2, 8-6, 6-4.

The standings up to yesterday are:

Puffer	11	0	1.000

VACATION DAYS IN SUMMER FORESTS

The Right Sort of Idleness for Young and Old Is Offered

By CHARLES H. SHINN, Forest Examiner.

Those who have discovered that the whole outdoors belongs to those who know how to use it, are often saddened by the way in which thousands of city people take hasty and unplanned vacations in our forests. They are apt to go too far, take too much along, move about altogether too rapidly, and come home quite worn out with the trip. All these things are made easier by a little thought, correspondence and getting ready beforehand.

The beauty of the well-conducted recreation centers, municipal camps, etc., now becoming so common in the California mountains, is that those who go there can settle right down and begin to rest, and learn how to get the most out of the outdoor game. If one has but two weeks' vacation it is unwise to spend half of it in finding a lonely spot and making a lonely camp. That justly belongs to those who can take a month or more.

But the time is coming when literally thousands of forest lovers will build for themselves small, inexpensive cabins by springs, will put in a stove and some cheap utensils and will leave them there in perfect safety from one summer till the next one.

We once saw this sign on a Shasta cabin in the pine forests east of Millville:

John Smith of — owns this. Comes up every summer.

Use it if you wish.

Please leave address. A notebook and pencil were on the rough table; a broom and shovel were in the corner. Everything was left neat and clean by the owner, and he told us that he always found it the same way when he went there. Few people as yet realize the extent to which this plain, simple forest fellowship is practised in our mountains, nor how far it goes toward educating forest users to avoid fires and other wastes of natural resources.

RULING PASSION IS NEW FIELD

After 20 years' successful presentation on the stage of roles portraying the cynic, the satirist, the crafty, designing schemer and similar roles, George Arliss, probably the most widely known and most popular character actor in this country, has given to the public something new and entirely different from anything he has heretofore attempted.

This new role comes in the play, "The Ruling Passion," a comedy drama, second of the Arliss film productions for United Artists' corporation, opening last night at the Glendale theater as the feature. In this new motion picture Mr. Arliss will be seen in the role of a kindly hearted philanthropist, whose chief aim in life is to bring out only the best in himself and in all those with whom he comes in contact. This characterization is wholly opposite to that in which Mr. Arliss has come to be known so widely; the exact antithesis of the sinister roles, in the presentation of which he has had a long career of unbroken success.

H. H. McGillis of 1003 East Lomita avenue, who is enjoying his annual vacation from the Los Angeles Times, leaves tomorrow for Avalon, Catalina island, where he will remain until Sunday.

Unlucky--or Unable?

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc. (Copyright, 1922, by The Associated Newspapers.)

Recently I met a man I had not seen in a good many years. I was familiar with his early history. I knew that he had launched on a business career under unusually favorable auspices. Also I knew that in an exceedingly short while he had come to financial grief.

Then he had dropped out of sight, and I heard he had removed to a distant city. Now, once more encountering him, it needed only a glance to acquaint me with the fact that he and prosperity still were strangers.

He had much to tell me. Far had been his travels, numerous and varied the undertakings in which he had engaged. And always, it appeared, things had gone wrong with him, even after most promising beginnings.

Yet, he would have me understand, they had not gone wrong through any fault of his. A fatal misfortune had dogged his steps. He was the unluckiest man alive. For instance—

As he rambled on, explaining how this and that business associate had deceived him, how shabbily he had been treated by this and that employer, one thought insistently recurred to my mind. It was a phrase I had recently read in Charles Platt's admirable new book, "The Psychology of Social Life":

"Ignorance and inefficiency are ever sublimely unconscious of any limitation—they are always unlucky, never unable."

Perhaps I did my old acquaintance an injustice in letting this phrase haunt my mind while he told me his "hard luck" story.

But the odds are I did not. For out of every thousand so-called unlucky men you will not find more than one—if indeed you can find one in ten thousand—whose seeming unfortunateness is not synonymous with incompetency.

And the tragedy of it is that if only these poor victims of their own shortcomings would make an effort to ascertain the real cause or causes of their perpetual failures many among them might win their way from the ruck of the unlucky to the ranks of the deservedly lucky. The defects that keep them down are not necessarily incurable defects. Often they possess talent enough, but talent clouded and hidden by faulty mental habits that constitute the heaviest of handicaps, making their native talent quite useless to them.

It is because they fail to appreciate these faulty habits, hence fail to struggle against them, that they remain unable to rise in the economic scale. What they need—what virtually every man who deems himself unlucky needs above all else—is frank self-confrontation, honest self-examination.

And not until this need is recognized will there be any likelihood—or, for that matter, any possibility—of "luck" turning for the better.

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

A DISLOCATED THUMB

It happened so suddenly that Joey Samuel hardly recognized his own hand when he looked at it.

The boys had been playing ball on a street corner. Someone threw an unusually swift ball. Joey caught it, and something happened to his thumb.

The pain was pretty severe, and as he hugged his hand against his chest and bit his lip hard to keep from crying, Joe backed away from the street corner and wondered if he had really broken his thumb. It looked so queer. And it felt so queer. Then Joey himself began to feel queer. His head felt dizzy and he had a vague sense of achiness in the pit of his small stomach. His lips felt prickly.

"Oh, Joey, what's matter? What's the matter? Lemme see!" shrieked the small boy at the corner, swarming around Joey like active cannibals, much more interested in "seeing" than in the fact that Joey was half fainting with pain.

Danny's Mother to the Rescue
"Aw, 'snother'! Hurt my thumb. Feel funny." And Joey collapsed suddenly on the sidewalk.

Joey had been sick and he was still "shaky," as he explained later. Thoroughly frightened, his friends clustered close, with the exception of Danny, his closest chum, who went flying wildly down the street and in at the open gate of his own yard. "Mother!" he called. Oh, mother! Come and see what's the matter with Joey. He's down on Perkins' corner and I think he's dyin'.

So Danny's mother flew down the street like a flash of blue linen, her apron fluttering wildly, hairpins scattering as she ran. She discovered that Joey had not exactly fainted, that he was more frightened than hurt, and that he had dislocated his thumb.

So, right there on the street corner, before an admiring throng of small boys, Danny's mother held Joey's grimy hand firmly, murmuring words of sympathy to the white and said, "Just a minute, Joey. This is going to hurt—like everything. But it will straighten your thumb and stop the pain."

Joey Faces Ordeal Bravely
And though Joey winced and shut his eyes very hard, no sound escaped his lips as Danny's mother took his thumb firmly in her hand and pulled it straight away from his hand. The joint slipped into place. The pain stopped. Joey smiled.

"Now you come along home with me and soak this poor old thumb in ice water for a while and we will put an ice compress on it. Danny and the boys will take turns changing the compresses. Because a dislocation wrenches the ligaments by the displacement of an articular bone. And cold applications will keep down the swelling and stop the pain."

"There isn't any pain now," said Joey, clinging to the hand of Danny's mother and walking very fast to keep up with her. He was very much impressed. He hadn't even known that he had an articular bone in his thumb.

13-YEAR-OLD SINGER HOME

SEATTLE, Wash., July 26.—"Bob" Murray, 13, has returned to Seattle. Bob is a singer who has attracted wide attention throughout the country on account of the purity and range of his notes.

Bob is able to register notes five notes higher than a piano. Caruso, after hearing him, said, "You are the coming tenor of the world."

Bob has just returned from a concert tour, but he was sad when he arrived here. His pet spitz dog had died during his absence, and there were big tears in Bob's eyes when he learned the news.

Bob off the concert stage is a "regular feller." He is a good baseball player, and would much rather get out his "ole mitt" and play on the sand lot, than stay at home and sing.

During his eastern trip he was the sensation of New York City. He was one of the invited group of famous artists who sang at the memorial concert in Carnegie hall. On June 6 he sang before the National and New York State Federation of Music clubs. Later he went on a western tour.

But in Bob's eyes the tour was a failure—because his dog died while he was away.

Stories of Famous Cases

By Detective NICK HARRIS

THE PAL OF JIMMY THE RAT

In Two Parts—Part 1

"A REAL pal is the greatest thing in the world, I don't care whether you are a crook or not," said Jimmy the Rat, and he told me the story of "Micky," the "kid who stuck." It is set forth here, just as Jimmy told it to me—probably the one human being in the world in whom he confided.

Jimmy was a reformed burglar, pickpocket, "night prowler" what you will. He would have been rated by a psychologist as entirely wanting in those qualities that made for moral responsibility. Yet, deep down in the heart of this misplaced atom of humanity, doomed to eternally work out his redemption in this or some other life, lurked wholly likeable qualities that placed him apart from others of his class.

One such was his affection for Micky, an irresponsible, tatter-tailed and born hobo, who had two front teeth missing, a cheerful grin and a pair of Irish eyes that owned to no possible origin save the Emerald Isle. Thrown together one night in a boxcar, while beating their way out of a middle west town, a mutual liking sprang up. It was a matter of hours only before they were "pals"—a relation whose strong-riveted links are stronger among certain human strata than any brace of handcuffs ever made.

"Let's make a try for a hand-out," said Micky, as the train puffed along at a merry clip. "I ain't et since day before yesterday."

"Nor me," said Jimmy the Rat. He peered through a crack in the door. The lights of a town were just ahead—a water tank stop and then the station. The station spelled possible trouble for them, as there were always "harness dicks" and "rail dicks" hanging around such points.

"Let's shake the rattler at the tank," counseled Jimmy. His partner nodded. Together they swung wide the boxcar door. As the train ground to a halt with pinwheels on fire whirling from light-jacked brake shoes, the two swung off into the darkness and struck out for the center of town.

"There's a joint here I know," said Micky. He was more of a globetrotter and "bo" than Jimmy the Rat. He had, as he frequently boasted, underground "hangouts" from coast to coast, where he could "lie up" for a season or whenever a clue sniffer got on his trail.

The "joint" proved to be a pool-room and bar—a rendezvous for a certain type of yeggs and crooks that frequented that section of the state. It was managed by Big Joe, a huge, red-faced, scowling bandit, with a quick trigger finger and reputation not too savory, even among his associates.

One of Big Joe's assets, as Jimmy found out that night, was a big safe of ancient design, in which were a number of small safe-deposit boxes. These boxes Big Joe rented to sundry of his "customers" for their private "documents," although it was generally understood that the boxes housed loot taken in hold-ups and robberies which it was unsafe for the proprietors to carry on their individual persons.

With Micky leading the way, the two dusty, grimy travelers, fresh from the brake rods of a transcontinental limited, entered the place. They received no heartfelt welcome from the bull-necked proprietor. He permitted them to buy a round of drinks. Then he leaned over the counter. "Kick in," he said. "Whatcha want?"

"Nothing, Joe," said Micky easily. "We're beating it west and just blew in."

Big Joe gave him a suspicious glance. "Well, keep blowin'," he said truculently. "I don't know you."

"But, Joe," protested Micky. But the other cut him short.

"Aw, get out o' here!" he growled.

He reached behind the bar. Micky read the handwriting on the wall. One of two things was wrong—either Big Joe feared that they were prohibition officers, or else they had no "reputation" in that district. In the latter case, it was well known, as Micky explained afterward, that Big Joe never permitted strangers to hang around his place. It was too risky for him, in his capacity as a "fence" or receiver of stolen property.

Cold, hungry and disconsolate, Micky and Jimmy the Rat started up the street to find another haven. A policeman, who had been watching them over the top of Big Joe's door, withdrew into the shadows as they came out, came suddenly from the saloon, which they had left. He had stepped inside for a word with Big Joe, and what he learned had decided him.

"Come on, you bums," he said, as he caught the two weary wanderers by an arm each. "You's no good. You don't belong here. I guess we'll tuck you away, where you can't do any harm."

"Aw, hell!" growled Micky.

He knew, better than Jimmy the Rat, just what was ahead. His fears were borne out the next morning when the police judge, a cantankerous old fossil with a sense of his own importance, gave them 30 days each—"vaggued" them, as Micky expressed it—and ordered them to clear out at the end of that time.

The 30-day sentence for "doing nothing" embittered both Jimmy and Micky. They had come into the place with no grievance against any one, no intention of committing crime, and no desire for aught but a place to sleep, a bite to eat and a chance to "bump" with the daylight. But the sentence revised all that. When they were discharged, one August afternoon, and stood blinking the unaccustomed daylight, it was with a well-formulated and carefully-worked-out plan burning in the brains of both of them.

During the next day had spent in jail, Micky had worked out a solution of their arrest. It was Big Joe! He had tipped off the "cop" to their presence in town—to their being strangers in the poolroom. Micky understood thoroughly. Big Joe was protecting himself. The "cop" had to make an arrest now and then. Joe, like the squid, was fogging his own presence by directing attention to someone else.

But—Big Joe had made one mistake. He had not thrown them out soon enough. He had let them remain just long enough for Micky's keen eyes to take in the ancient safe with its strong boxes, and to appreciate the personality of those in the room. In that instant the rat had been telegraphed in his alert brain the information that there was money in that safe—plenty of it. Out of that realization had been born a plan.

They had $5 between them. Micky suggested that they rent a room, as in that way they would avoid being "vaggued" by the authorities if picked up again. So after considerable search Jimmy located a lodging house run by a Mrs. Monahan, and one could slip in and out without attracting any attention. Micky paid the woman in advance for a week, and tucked the receipt in his pocket.

At 2 o'clock the following morning Jimmy the Rat and his pal Micky, gained entrance to the place of Big Joe. By some necromancy of his art, Micky had managed to scrape up enough "soup," as nitro-glycerine is called by his craft, to "work" Big Joe's "box." They had worked out the details carefully, counting on fast action and Micky's knowledge of the country to effect their escape.

The plan worked, as Micky expressed it, "like a banana peel on the front steps." Ten minutes later, with the front crack of the door all neatly putted, and a rug rolled in front of the door to take up the impact, Micky touched a match to the fuse in front of the safe and blew off the door. Almost before the dull echo of the explosion died away Jimmy was into the boxes, handing back coin and bills and stuffing all he could grasp into his own pockets.

They were so engaged when a "night-hack," as a night watchman is known, disturbed by the sound of a seemingly distant explosion, decided to take a look at Big Joe's safe to see if everything was as it should be. He slipped his pass key into the lock of the front door, half opened it on its hinges and sprayed the interior with his night lamp. In the rays the figures of Micky and Jimmy the Rat stood forth in bold relief in front of the looted safe.

There was a rear door that led to a basement underneath Big Joe's place. Jimmy the Rat darted for it, calling to Micky to come. Instead, Micky closed with the watchman as the latter fired at him. The bullet whizzed past his head and buried itself in the plaster over the head of Jimmy the Rat as he made the half-open door and darted from the steps.

As he reached the bottom he heard the gun crack again, and then the shrill treble of the watchman's whistle. It was too late to go back now. Micky was either dead or captived. He could not help him. The whole in the wall would be aroused. It was a case of save his own skin, and that quickly. He groped around, feeling in the dark with his hands like a blind man. Finally he fell over a rope and tumbled head foremost onto a canvas floor. It was a prize ring in which Big Joe used to stage fights on special occasions. There were no footstools up above now. Men were running to and fro. There were voices. Frankly Jimmy burrowed around in the dark, seeking to find some avenue out of the hole in which he had trapped himself. It was only a matter of minutes before they would search the basement. The light from a street lamp struck full on his face, and he glanced up. There was a window, barred.

"Come on, boys; the other one is down here!"

The voice was that of a policeman and a beam of light from above wavered on the stairs and danced about questioning. Frankly Jimmy the Rat ran toward the darkest corner, to encounter a big, old-fashioned furnace, cold and cheerless, anchored to the floor. He tested the door with quick, hasty fingers. It was his only chance. With the sound of approaching feet whipling to a thing when tea is over?"

"Why, Tommy, Mr. and Mrs. Brown don't play in any band. Why do you ask such a question?"

"Because," said the terror, in disappointed tones, "I heard you tell papa that Mr. Brown played second fiddle to his wife."

There was music after tea and Tommy was the drum. The Pathfinder.

BUY A DIRECTORY CARD!

feenzy, he threw back the door and crawled inside the furnace.

Jimmy was not a big man, else he would not have made it. As it was, he had just time enough to get his feet inside. His head was against the flue. By stretching his neck in a badly cramped position, he could peep through the grating in the furnace door.

Within a few moments the basement was filled with "harness bulls"—police in uniform. Finally the voice of a policeman cut in: "He must have got out of here," he said.

Jimmy, crouching down in the furnace pit, took a long chance and peered through the grating. There, directly across the basement from the furnace, was a door leading into a back alley and safety. And, miracle of miracles, the door was wide open!

SPEED IN PLANT OF CITRUS TREES

Twelve years ago the Fontana Farms company, operating an 18,000-acre ranch six miles west of San Bernardino, faced the problem of planting 5000 acres to citrus trees from their own nurseries. Since that time they have added to this acreage every year.

Such large scale transplanting necessitated the development of a system that would not only facilitate handling, but also give a maximum of protection to the roots of the young trees.

A rather unique system eventually was adopted. Twelve-inch well-casing was cut into 12-inch lengths and an iron hoop riveted to the top edge of each section. After the foliage of the young trees is pruned back, these lengths are slipped over the foliage and trunk and driven down around the roots until the tops are flush with the ground.

This is done by two men with steel tamping bars. The pipe with the roots and the original earth enclosed then is dug up and loaded on to a wagon. In the grove the pipe is put in place, and after earth has been thrown loosely around it, is slipped out, leaving the tree in its new position.

The entire process from pruning the tree in the nursery to loading it on the wagon consumes less than five minutes.

SURVEY OF FROSTED TREE TREATMENTS

During the past few months the writer and other members of the agricultural extension service, have made a survey of citrus trees injured by previous freezing. There has been considerable disagreement as to results of various methods, some having success, while others did not. The treatment of young trees has been especially puzzling. Large and small acreages of young trees were treated in order to rebuild them. Various systems were used, some of which are as follows:

1. Cut off below the head or main limbs and allow a single shoot to grow (trunk to be cut off later).

2. Cut off below the head and allow several shoots to grow, tying one to the trunk for rebuilding and cutting the others off one to three years later.

3. Bud below the bud union is the old stock, training up two three shoots, only one of which will form the tree, others to be gradually eliminated.

4. Allow shoots to grow from low bud union, which will be budded over to desired variety. (Also methods are for severely injured trees.)

The survey indicated that in coastal districts, which are subject to favorable climatic conditions, the production of heart rot fungus is doubtful whether it is while to attempt to save severely injured young citrus trees. On other hand it was found that in interior valleys where heart rot fungus does not develop so readily, many groves were saved and are in good condition today.

NATIONS' LEAGUE MAY BE ENDED AT GENEVA

Third Assembly May See the Close of Its Activities

QUESTIONS AT THIRD GENERAL ASSEMBLY, SEPT. 4.

1. Admission of Germany and Hungary to the league.

2. Canada's proposal to suppress the famous article 10, of United States senate fame.

3. The adoption of Esperanto as an international language.

4. The adoption of a definite league plan for the reduction of land armaments.

5. The control of the opium traffic and the limitation of opium production.

6. Control of white slave traffic and traffic in children.

7. The deportation of women and children in Turkey and adjacent countries.

8. The establishment of the league's international health organization.

9. The carrying on of the technical work referred to the league by the Genoa conference, including finances.

10. The expatriation of Russian refugees at Constantinople.

11. International co-operation.

12. Various amendments to the covenant, especially relative to obligatory arbitration.

13. Increasing the size of the council and the election of the non-permanent members of that body.

ROME, July 25.—On the third general assembly of the League of Nations, which meets this year at Geneva, on September 4, depends the future role of the league itself.

It will depend on this meeting of the assembly whether the league shall be developed into something of a powerful, international organization that its founders intended, or whether it shall be allowed to degenerate merely into a routine, bureaucratic organization for handling certain international technical questions and disputes, but without authority, prestige or any great future.

Admittedly, the league to date has not been what its founders and supporters hoped and wished it would be.

When the first general assembly of the league was held at Geneva in September, 1920, it developed that the covenant as hastily drawn up at the peace conference at Paris was not the perfect instrument with which to meet the needs of the world as it now exists.

From the very first, therefore, the members of the league faced the necessity of modifying the covenant and the league itself.

However, the first assembly of the league of nations in 1920, largely at the instance of Balfour and Tittoni for Italy, took the attitude that the league was still very much of an experiment, that the wise thing to do was to wait a year and give the league and the covenant a thorough tryout.

As a consequence, everything tending to modify the league and the covenant in order to make the two more workable, was adjourned in mass until the second assembly of 1921.

When the second general assembly of the league came on in September, 1921, it found the big powers no more ready to go ahead and develop the league than they had been the year previous.

In the meantime, however, a new factor had developed—the Washington conference the following November.

None of the big powers were certain just what the latter might develop. Hence, the big powers asserted, it was again wisdom to wait still another year, before altering the league.

As a consequence, everything intended to change or modify either the league or the covenant was again postponed until the third assembly of the league, now approaching.

The September assembly of the league this year must be decisive for the league's future role. The big nations must face squarely the issue either of developing the league or else merely relegate it to the ranks of a bureaucratic, technical organization. Stalling, it is declared, is no longer possible, especially as the smaller nations, who want the league to be a real, big, world-wide factor, will not permit longer to have the decision delayed and will not continue the heavy expense of participation in and maintenance of the league unless the latter is going to fulfill some of the hopes which the smaller nations cherished of it.

If the powers refuse to give it the authority to go ahead and at the same time refuse to take a definite stand as to limiting the activities of the league, the result will be the same as though the latter decision had actually been taken. The league will go down and out.

In a general way, however, league supporters are hopeful. They point out that the Washington conference fell far short of the attainments that were hoped of it; the Genoa conference fell far shorter, and the indications are that the Hague conference will dash the last hope of readjusting the world by means of international conference. They figure that the period of experiments has passed both for the league and for other methods of international cooperation and that the consensus of the world will be in favor of the league.

NO BANDIT SCARE IN TAMPICO NOW

TAMPICO, Mexico (By Mail).—Americans in Tampico are not worried over the numerous reports of attacks by bandits.

While they admit the attacks in many instances are serious, they have become so used to the continual reports that they are not alarmed.

The alleged bandit raids are not even discussed, but instead the conversations, when not about oil, are about golf, baseball, dances, etc.

Most of the Americans in Tampico live in their own homes. All of the large companies have special homes for their officials, which are in groups or colonies and guarded by the company's police.

Oil companies have constructed several ball parks and an "oil league" plays a regular schedule.

The Los Mangos golf club, an American institution, has a fine course of nine holes and a golf house near the city. This course was completed May 1, 1922. Garven Scott McCurdy, an oil official and managing editor of the Foreign Legionaire, is the director of the club.

The American Legion is very active in the city and takes the lead in arranging for entertainment for the Americans.

The Fourth of July celebration, which began early in the morning and ended with a dance at night, surpassed many of the larger celebrations in the United States. All the English-speaking people in the city joined with the Americans in the celebration which was staged by the Legion. The Mexican general in this district had his band furnish the music for the day.

American women take an active part in the entertainments and they have formed an auxiliary to assist the Legion.

Little Dorothy was very fond of Bible stories. One day after her mother had read the story of Lot's wife, she asked:

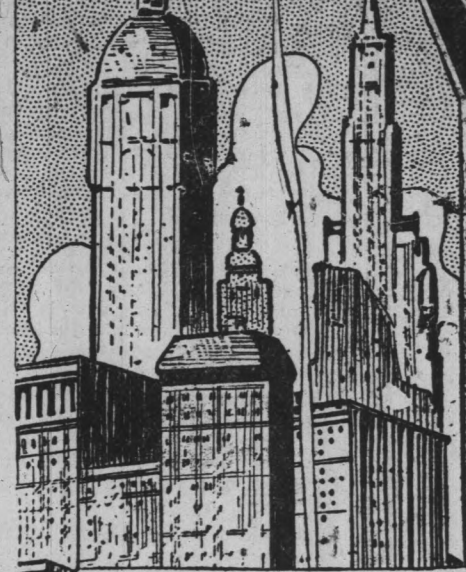

"Mamma, what did Mr. Lot do when his wife was turned into a pillar of salt?"

"What do you think he did?" asked her mamma.

"Why," replied the practical little miss, "I s'pose he went out and hunted up a fresh one."

Laziness kills courage.

LOVE OF CHILD LIFE MAY LURE PONTIFF

Pius XI May Quit Prison
Because of Interest in Playground

ROME (By Mail).—Will a little child lead Pope Pius XI from his voluntary prison in the Vatican?

Will children accomplish that which diplomats and governments have failed to do since the papal state lost its temporal power in 1870?

These are questions which are being asked in Vatican circles with growing insistence.

And if this breaking down of a historic tradition occurs, America will be the cause.

The present Pope's broad humanitarianism and his fondness for children, especially, are as well known as his erudition and his understanding of world affairs.

When Edward L. Hearn came to Rome recently as head of the Knights of Columbus in the Eternal City, His Holiness Pope Pius XI questioned him at length about practical humanitarian work.

Pope Pius XI's desire to make his occupancy of the papal throne one which will always be remembered in its social and moral humanitarian features is frankly admitted.

A plan of the Knights of Columbus which brought forth the papal enthusiasm at once is the establishment of playgrounds—real American playgrounds in the densely populated districts of Rome.

When the American playground system had been explained to His Holiness, with its shower baths, its sanitary and recreational features, his interest was intense.

He refused the assistance of an interpreter and insisted that Hearn talk to him in English, although his replies were in Italian. The Pope speaks English, but with hesitancy.

"But that is one of the greatest steps in moral and social welfare," His Holiness is quoted as saying. "Its influence is inestimable."

When it was explained that upon the completion of the playgrounds they would be dedicated to him and given to the public in his name, Pope Pius XI's exclamation of pleasure set whispers of conjecture astir.

His Holiness is said to have exclaimed: "Then I will come myself to bless them! I will leave the Vatican to give my benediction upon this great work in public morals and health."

So keenly interested did the Pope become that in looking over the plans, he suddenly asked:

"But could you not place a playground here—I have a piece of ground which you could use. It is where I could look out from my windows and watch the children at play."

Ascending the papal throne in the midst of international tangles, whose solution is one of his great interests, the fact that Pius XI finds time to consider the non-political features of social welfare marks a dominant characteristic in the pontiff.

My first impression of Pope Pius XI at a recent audience was of a man of unusually keen perceptive powers. Of the three Popes with whom I have had audiences, the present pontiff radiates the greatest alertness. In the audience room there were five Americans together. Coming to us, the Holy Father stopped and inquired, "Americans?"

With an apparent air of not scrutinizing, the Pope sees everything.

His love of children was greatly in evidence on this occasion. Near me was a mother with a little boy. The Pope stopped and talked, his hand on the child's head, then he blessed it and passed on. Further along was a mother with two tiny children, one not over two years old. The Pope stopped again and talked with the mother and children. When he passed on tears of emotion were streaming down the woman's cheeks.

The devotion of Pope Pius XI to children and their welfare is considered good grounds for believing his expressed intention of leaving the Vatican upon the dedication of the Knights of Columbus playgrounds.

The rumor that Pope Pius XI is to leave his "prison walls" recurs with persistent regularity. It was believed that he would break over these traditional barriers which have held his predecessors so long during these recent eucharistic conference.

There is now a firm belief in the minds of Roman observers that the present Pope will take the historic step.

If he does so upon the dedication of the playgrounds established in his name by the Knights of Columbus in behalf of the children of Rome, it will establish more profoundly than ever the great respect and love which his devotion to children has inspired.

The acquisition of satisfactory grounds for playground centers met a check for which the American way of doing things was quite unprepared. The deal was practically concluded when it was fortunately discovered that the city had a right to run three roads through the property. Of course all plans for this site were off.

The Knights of Columbus plan to institute six playgrounds in Rome and one will be located so that the Pope's great desire to look from his Vatican "windows" and see the children as play may be gratified.

Markwich—Does your sister like reading?

Jones—Yes, she considers reading a pleasure, but it usually takes her longer than anybody else to read a book because she always forgets where she stopped reading the last time and has to start at the beginning again to be on the safe side.

The Power of Suggestion

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.
(Copyright, 1922, by The Associated Newspapers.)

Suggestion, as you have often heard, is one of the most potent of all forces determining human conduct. It is so potent that, through the energy it imparts to ideas it lodges in the mind, it may influence not only conduct but also the character and even the health.

In this belief you have endeavored at various times to make a very definite use of suggestion in your own behalf. You have perhaps desired to overcome some bad habit through suggestion's aid, or perhaps to escape from the paralyzing thrill of diffidence and timidity.

Again and again you have reiterated to yourself the suggestion that the habit or trait in question will no longer handicap you. Yet it continues to handicap you. So that you begin to doubt whether suggestion is, after all, so potent as it has been described to you.

Quite possibly, as a matter of fact, this doubt has been in the back of your mind all along. In which case the doubt would itself be a suggestion preventing you from accepting and acting on the better ideas you have been trying to suggest to yourself.

Or it may be that you have not been using suggestion systematically enough, or not using it under conditions sufficiently favorable to the dynamic acceptance by your mind of the self-suggested ideas.

It does not suffice, for example, simply to say to yourself from time to time, "I am no longer timid," or the more positive assertion, "I will be brave under all circumstances." In order that the suggested idea of courage may "take," the reiteration of the idea should be made at specially prescribed periods daily.

In particular it is helpful to choose as suggestion periods the first few minutes after awakening, and the minutes when one grows drowsy just before falling asleep at night. It is because one is then most closely in touch with the subconscious region of the mind.

And, as emphasized by all authorities on suggestion—emphasized perhaps most strongly of all in the latest work on the subject, Charles Baudouin's unusual book, "Suggestion and Autosuggestion"—it is only when suggested ideas take root in the subconscious that they become determinants of conduct, character and health.

For this same reason all who would profit from self-suggestion will the more surely do so if, whenever during the day they wish to suggest this or that idea to themselves, they begin by assuming an attitude conducive to subconscious rather than conscious mental activity.

Let them, that is to say, lie down or seat themselves comfortably with their eyes closed. There should be as complete bodily and mental relaxation as possible. Darkening the room, listening to the monotonous ticking of a clock, will promote the necessary relaxation.

Then, when body and mind are relaxed, there should be a meditative contemplation of the idea to be suggested. In the words of Baudouin: "Call up as vividly as possible the image of the desired bodily and mental ameliorations."

Which, you may protect, means much practice and much patience. Perhaps not so much as you imagine. In any event the tax in practice and patience should certainly not seem excessive in view of the important end you wish to gain.

PELICAN MIKE OF LONG BEACH

LONG BEACH, Calif., July 25.—Pelican Mike, well-known on the beaches and piers here, has been given a place in the hall of fame of animaldom.

Mike is noted for his frequent sensible arbitration and settlement of disputes between seagulls.

The other day, as Mike was flapping his course lazily around in the air, looking for a fish to venture close to the surface, spectators became interested in another little animal scene near a cliff.

A seagull with an injured wing had taken refuge at the bottom of a cliff.

A cat had discovered it and pounced on it with fury and was making short work of it.

Pelican Mike observed the little scene, so flapped over to take a look. Apparently he wasn't satisfied with results, for spectators were astonished to see him suddenly swoop down, seize the screaming cat in his big bill, and flap away out over the ocean, where he finally dropped the cat, and where no one thought to rescue it.

PHILIPPINE HERO MAY NOT ARRIVE

MANILA, P. I., July 25.—General Aguinaldo, who opposed the American forces in 1898-99, and later became an American citizen of high standing, may not sail for the United States late this month to wage a campaign for Philippine independence, as he had planned to do.

Lack of funds for use of the party is said to be the present stumbling block to the tour. It was to be piloted around on the start of the tour by Manuel Q. son, Philippine leader, who is now here at the head of the Philippine independence mission.

The reason so many persons' minds wander is because the bodies can't.

Capt. Ralph Eberlin and Capt. Hamilton Johnston

Two of the outstanding heroes of the World war were Captain Ralph Eberlin and Captain Hamilton Johnston, who served in the 38th U. S. Infantry (Rock of the Marne regiment), in the Third division. They met again at Plattsburgh, N. Y., where both are detailed as instructors at a reserve officers' training camp. Captain Johnston won the distinguished service cross the same day for capturing a machine gun nest. He also was awarded the French Legion of Honor and the croix de guerre with palm. Captain Johnston is military instructor at Syracuse (N. Y.) university.

SHAKESPEARE FOLIO BRINGS BIG PRICE

$50,000 Paid for Rare
Volume of 1632
by Collector

NEW YORK, July 26.—Another rare book that cost the price of an entire library has just been purchased by an American, Henry C. Folger, president of the Standard Oil company of New York. It is a copy of Shakespeare's plays, published in 1632, and known as the Daniel First Folio, one of the two or three best of its type in existence.

It is believed that Folger paid about $50,000 for the book, which is to be placed in a private museum he is building on his California estate. The book first became famous in 1834, when it was bought by Baroness Burdett-Coutts for 712 pounds, then a record price.

HE FOUND A MODEL.
Two men chanced to be sitting opposite each other in a subway train. Presently one of them produced a notebook and proceeded to make a sketch of the other. After he had completed the drawing he shut up the book and returned it to his pocket.

The man opposite was both interested and gratified by this attention, and leaning forward, said: "You are an artist, I perceive, sir."

"No," replied the other, "I'm not exactly an artist. I'm a designer of door knockers."—Kansas City Star.

HIGH HONORS FOR SIR HENRY WILSON

The Funeral of Sir Henry Wilson in London.

Full military honors were accorded Sir Henry Wilson, victim of Irish zealots, who murdered him on the steps of his London home, thousands lining the streets as the dead field marshal was taken to St. Paul's cathedral. The body was borne on a gun carriage and his white horse, with stirrups reversed, may be seen following the funeral cortege.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THE RIGHT WORD

(With apologies to W. Curtis Nicholson)
FIND THE ERROR IN THE FOLLOWING:

The Scotch are a race of spend-thrifts. They care nothing for money and will trade a dollar for a button any time owing to the fact that despite centuries of education they cannot tell the difference. Henry Cabot Lodge is one of the best of good fellows and would rather shoot craps, play poker, or go on a joy ride than make a dignified address on the floor of congress.

Samuel Gompers issued a statement today saying, "The trouble with organized labor is that it wants too much. It's about time the working classes gave the capitalists a square deal."

Eamonn De Valera was found the other day on the scene of a hard fight in great personal danger.

The Standard Oil company announced today that on and after next Tuesday every pumping station in the country will retail gasoline at 4 cents a gallon and distribute it free to motorists who are without funds.

WHICH IS THE BETTER?

CASE NO. I.
1—Here comes Alfred back from the drug store empty-handed.

2—Here comes Alfred back from the drug store with a quart of gin.

NO. II.
1—Then man sitting at the table in the speak-easy arose and said to his companion, "Well, I've gotta be going now."

2—The man sitting at the table in the speak-easy kept his seat and said to his companion, "Well, now it's my turn. Whistle you have?"

NO. III.
1—The horse you bet on to win the steeplechase won by five lengths at 50 to 1.

2—The horse you bet on to win the steeplechase fell at the second jump and broke his neck.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH THE FOLLOWING SENTENCES?

1—A man walked into a restaurant and ordered chicken pie. When it came there was chicken in it.

2—Bertha, who is on her summer vacation, has been away 11 days and hasn't sent home a single postcard saying "Wish you were here."

3—Representative Herick is the brainiest man in congress and hates women and publicity.

4—Mexican Petroleum is the ideal investment for a widow with a few hundred dollars.

5—This is the driest summer in fifty years.

YESTERDAY'S ERROR
In yesterday's test we said, "Frederick who has gone in search of a glass cannot find one. The error lay in the word 'cannot find.' Just after writing the sentence Frederick located one. One should never make a statement of this sort until the person making the quest has been out a half hour or so. And it should be remembered that, even though he find nothing but a paper cup, the statement is to all intents and purposes rendered null and void as well as nux vomica and status nil.

WORD OFTEN IMPROPERLY USED.
NO—This word is more frequently used improperly than any other in the English language, possibly excepting the word "YES." It is very difficult to know just when to say "Yes" or "I don't care if I do." When in doubt say "I'll take a cigar this time."

YES—This word is the curse of the English language. It never should be used without grave deliberation. Historical examples: The Kaiser's reply to von Hindenburg's "Yes, it's cold," said Smith, "but nothing like what it was three years ago, when the steam from the engines froze hard and fell on the track in lumps."

"That wasn't as cold as '87," continued Jones, "when it froze the electricity in the telephone wires, and when the men came to the machines were talking as hard as they could for more than five hours!"

"The coldest year I can remember was in '84," said Brown, "when the telegraph messengers had to hurry to keep themselves warm."

But this was too much. With silent looks of indignation the other two left the romancer to his own reflections.

Who remembers when in order to be dignified you had to wear side whiskers?

Truths in Epigram

It is common vice of all, in old age, to be too intent upon our interests.—Terence (185-159 B. C.).

Truth is its (justice's) handmaid, freedom its child, peace is its companion, safety walks in its steps, victory follows in its train; it is the brightest emanation from the Gospel; it is the attribute of God.—Smith (1769-1845).

SACREDNESS OF THE COURTS

Kathryn Sellers of Washington has sentenced Judge Willis Brown to forty-eight hours in jail and to pay a fine of $50 for contempt. It seems that the second judge, who had achieved some fame on the juvenile bench in Utah, had ventured to express in print, an adverse criticism of a ruling by the first judge. This is to be observed the fact that a theory that courts are sacred is held by some jurists.

Courts have certain prescribed methods of procedure. Any witness or lawyer who interrupts, or who impedes, or casts a reflection upon the intelligence of the presiding judge, or questions his (or her) probity, is subject to instant penalty. Sometimes this is applied in a dignified and proper fashion. Sometimes the punishment is accompanied by a display of judicial prejudice and spleen, that shows the contempt to have been wholly justifiable, and causes it to be shared in by the public.

That the courts are not universally held in high esteem is the fault of the system by which they are conducted. The needless delays, the petty technicalities, the undisputed sway of the criminal lawyer as he flouts justice and defies the spirit of the statutes, explains the status of popular opinion. Long trials are permitted when the guilt of the prisoner is known to all. Insanity is tolerated as a plea in instances when everybody knows it is fraudulent in intent and in actuality. In a murder case, the victim, rather than the perpetrator of the crime, is the person tried. Efforts are made to besmirch the character of the dead, even when this could have no bearing on the matter at issue. A thousand extraneous and irrelevant details are dragged in, with no purpose but to befog the one real issue, and if possible to cause it to be lost to sight.

It is constitutionally allowable to criticize a president, a cabinet, a congress. Were this not so every editor in the land would be in jail. There does not appear any reason why the courts should be exempt. They are human institutions, subject to error, and often they do err.

WOMEN FOR MOORE

The endorsement received by Charles C. Moore from the women of California contains no element of surprise. Quite accustomed to the ballot now, the women remember easily when they were waging a contest for the privilege of voting. They recall that at that time they appealed to Johnson for aid, which they did not receive. They perceive that Johnson is tied up to Hearst in a way that makes him subservient to the editor. This interests them in more ways than one. In the first place they are aware that Hearst did not advocate suffrage until, fearing its triumph despite his opposition, he rushed in at the eleventh hour to proffer help they had ceased to need. In this way he procured the chance to claim, as usual, credit for the whole result. The pretense has been kept up ever since. It has failed utterly to deceive the new citizens.

In the war California was loyal. It resented the presence of disloyal publications such as Hearst was conducting here and elsewhere. The women of the state were as devoted and earnest and effective in their efforts to back the government, as were the men. The women could not bear arms, but into every other duty connected with the conduct of the war, they threw themselves with fervor. They proved their capacity not alone for enthusiastic patriotism, but for the performance of heavy tasks. Many went to the front. Others repined that the opportunity was withheld from them.

While they were thus variously engaged, Hearst was doing all in his power to promote the welfare of Germany. He opposed the sending of money, munitions, food, and above all, the sending of troops to save the allies. Between the lines of his papers gleamed the fire of hatred for the allies. He defended the sinking of the Lusitania. He kept in Berlin at least one correspondent who was in the pay of the German government by reason of the treasonable matter he could cause to appear in the Hearst papers. Such are a few of the facts to be found in recent and authentic history. They are worth considering at this time.

After the war Hearst bitterly fought measures designed to establish world peace on a permanent basis. He fought the four power treaty, the great and benign project formulated by the administration. As one of his instruments in this unholy assault, he used Senator Johnson. He was a client of Johnson's, had paid him big fees, and on occasion had financed the senator's political activities. His influence had won the senator a fat job as a Tammany attorney; fine and fitting job for a vociferous reformer.

The reason these circumstances are recounted here is that the retention of Senator Johnson would be, virtually, the election of Hearst to the senatorship. Johnson represents Hearst. He does not represent California. He has spurned the ideals he once professed to cherish. Republicans of this state, true to the government and the administration, devoted to party interests, believing in high standards of Americanism, do not want a Hearst to overshadow the fair fame of the commonwealth by dictating the selection of senator, and assuming the senator's authority for himself.

And Senator Johnson ought to know the women of California, alert, interested in the welfare, and awake to the situation, have in him, and never had any faith in his pr. associate and superior.

MINIMUM PAY

The minimum pay of ministers for one denomination has been set at $1500 a year, and a house. When a minimum is determined upon, there is a wide tendency to regard it also as a maximum. Yet there sometimes is complaint that young men hesitate to enter the ministry. Here is the reason in plain figures. A salary of $1500 a year represents about $30 a week. Recently there has been heated discussion of the minimum wage of $15 a week for women in certain industries. The general opinion is that this is too little for one individual to live on decently.

A minister is under obligation to keep his family decently. He must dress well, and so must the members of his household. It is impossible for them wholly to escape social duties, the performance involving some cost. There is a natural desire to educate the children. All these things are not to be done on an income of $1500 a year even with free lodging thrown in. To do this would make his problem more difficult than that of the $15 a week working girl. Looking forward to a career, a young man's self respect urges the choice of one that will be likely to yield him a living. If he can't see it in the ministry he will seek it in another calling, and nobody would be inclined to censure him.

SOMEWHERE ELSE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

To the roving and dissatisfied spirit of man the time when he is to be happy is always tomorrow and the place is somewhere else.

It was Thomas Huxley who said that we all believe that it is pleasant on the other side of the street.

We are creatures of imagination, and almost all of our fun comes from the imagination, and we have a way of trampling actuality under foot.

The commonest, though unspoken, creed of mankind is, "Whatever is, is punk." As the late Mr. Pope expressed it, "Man never is, but always to be, blest."

An illustration of this is given by an account furnished by a newspaper reporter of a young American in London.

Standing on the Strand he saw among the buses which passed, one labelled with the mystic word "Limehouse."

He had read about the Limehouse Nights, and as he had somewhat of a thirst for adventure, he boarded the bus.

It took a long while for bus No. 25 to get to Limehouse. It passed through Whitechapel and the East End and along row after row of dingy, two-story houses. At last the destination was reached.

He found the center of Limehouse to be a drab little square, quiet and peaceful. It was surrounded by dingy buildings. There were the usual number of pubs.

The American, says our reporter, looked about him. All was serene and calm. No Chinese were in sight. No opium joints seemed functioning. No drunken sailors lurched past.

"Well, where are all the murderers?" the Yankee asked a bobby standing sentry duty outside a pub.

"None around here, sir," was the answer. "These are very quiet parts."

"But I thought this was the tough section, hop houses, Chinks, a pretty rough gang all around."

"Oh, no, sir—very quiet, like. Let's see—there was a fight last July in pub, but nothing much. No—there's a few Chinks round here. Let's see—there's a Chinese restaurant up in Piccadilly—if you want excitement."

The American said nothing, but the "bobby" continued:

"You're a foreigner, aren't you, sir?" American? That so? From Chicago, you say?"

The cop edged closer, with sudden interest. "You're from Chicago? And you come 4000 miles to peaceful, sleepy old Limehouse looking for a thrill. Why, mister, I've spent all my life wishing I could go to Chicago and be a copper in that place you call the 'Loop'—down where all those murderers and gunmen and gangsters are. There's a life for you—there's thrills. Say—I'd chuck this job any time to work there—where there was something doing like."

"SAINT TERESA"

(Find the error in this article.)

Except one, observes the good and bad points in the writings of modern authors, he does not learn the present-day faults of grammar, nor, on the other hand, does he acquire the latest, best, and universally accepted forms of expression.

Henry Sydney Harrison's "Saint Teresa," a very interesting story of this year, is well written, and is, therefore, subject to little adverse criticism.

Following are a few comments in passing. Page 219: "She answered in a voice that seemed to tremble a little." The relative pronoun, that, is used in this sentence, instead of which, because "that seemed to tremble a little" is a restrictive clause identifying voice, in which construction no comma is placed between voice and that.

Page 210: "... that it was as if the company had never taken ..." Here as if is used correctly. The construction is worthy of consideration, as so many writers and speakers make the mistake of using as though in analogous expressions.

Page 303: "... it was as if that community of sympathy ..." This is another example of the correct use of as if.

Page 384: "... of anything's having happened ..." This excerpt illustrated the correct use of the possessive case before a verbal noun such as having happened. Many make the error of writing: of anything having happened.

THE LISTENING POST

The Philosopher came upon a man who sat before a slab of granite. Smoothed like a tablet. Upon which were graven deep-cut designs. Cut there with a chisel and hammer. The chisel durable enough and the hammer heavy enough to grave the stone.

The man pondered long and earnestly before the tablet.

Shook his head as though in sorrow and regret. An occasional tear coursed down his cheeks. And then he dipped a sponge into a pail and withdrew it.

He passed the wet sponge back and forth over the granite tablet.

Endlessly and patiently he worked. Rubbed vigorously.

And with each rubbing he gazed again upon the marks in the slab.

Put his finger into them to see if they were any less deep than before.

Then he shook his head. Dipped the sponge into the pail again. And rubbed as before.

Seeking it seemed to rub out the marks in the granite.

But although he labored all day and through the night the marks remained as before.

Clear cut, deep and enduring. And with the new day the man started again.

With the sponge and pail. Wetting and dipping and rubbing and trying the marks with his finger.

The Philosopher was interested. And after a day had passed and another day and another he ventured to speak to the man.

Asked him what he was doing. And the man told him he was seeking to wipe out the marks in the stone.

"Who carved them?" asked the Philosopher.

"I did," replied the man. "Why do you wish to rub them out?" asked the Philosopher.

"They are the record of things of which I am ashamed," the man replied.

"What are you seeking to wipe them out with?" asked the Philosopher.

"A sponge and my tears," the man returned.

"What success are you having?" asked the Philosopher.

"None at all," said the man. "Then why continue?" asked the Philosopher.

"So I may begin again," said the man. "There is a new tablet," said the Philosopher. "There is the chisel and hammer. Here is a new day. Why not leave the old tablet to tell its story as it will, but upon the new tablet carve something you shall be proud of?"

"But the old tablet and its carvings will condemn me," said the man.

"Not if the new tablet and its carvings commend you," said the Philosopher. "Indeed, the story of the tablets will be that of error regretted and atoned for by splendor achieved and made glorious."

And the man poured out the tears from the pail.

Threw away his sponge. Held the chisel and hammer with firm hands. And set to work to carve new figures and letters.

And enduring to this day on the first tablet is the story of the man's shame.

And on the second tablet the story of his atonement and achievement.

And on a third tablet the Philosopher carved this:

"Through Error by Courage to Achievement."

SONGS OF THE POETS

A Quiet Soul—By John Oldham (1653-1683)

Thy soul within such silent pomp did keep,
As if humanity were lul'd asleep;
So gentle was thy pilgrimage beneath,
Time's unheard feet scarce make less noise,
Or the soft journey which a planet goes;

Life seem'd all calm as its last breath.
A still tranquility so hush'd thy breast,
As if some Halcyon were its guest,
And there had built her nest;
It hardly now enjoys a greater rest.

Army Builds Big Airship to Carry Battle Planes

The first large-sized semi-rigid helium airship of all American design is now being constructed at Akron, Ohio.

This will also be the first American floating aerial base and airplane-carrier.

This ship will be used experimentally to develop the lighter-than-air machine as a fuel saving, long distance carrier and mother ship to airplanes that will take off and attach themselves to it in the air, according to Major P. E. Van Nostrand, in charge of the balloon section, United States army air service at Washington.

The new craft will have a capacity of from 700,000 to 800,000 cubic feet of gas and will be something less than 400 feet long and will be propelled by four 12-cylinder Liberty motors able to drive the airship at the rate of 70 miles an hour. It will be able to carry two or three airplanes, but experiments will be begun with the use of one plane of small-type which will be carried underneath the ship and launched from that position.

By merely throttling down the speed of the plane, it will be able to fly underneath and hook on to the mother ship. Airships large enough to carry from five to 50 planes may be developed as a result of these experiments.

"Leaving and returning during flight is a simple matter," Major Van Nostrand claims. "As long as the airplane stays in its natural element there is little chance of trouble. It will furnish a safer method than that of the hydroplane lighting on rolling ships around which there are frequently treacherous air currents and will be much superior to present ground landings."

The new airship is especially designed for helium gas which has about 8 per cent less lifting power than flammable hydrogen heretofore used. On account of this the bag must have a larger capacity to raise the same amount of dead weight.

Helium gas is also too scarce and valuable to be released to regulate the altitude of the craft. In the ordinary balloon and airship when it is desired to go higher ballast is thrown out and when necessary to descend gas is let out.

In the new helium aircraft, the necessity of valving or throwing out ballast is partly compensated for by cooling or heating the helium and thus causing it to contract or expand as desired.

Using the gasoline fuel during a long trip would ordinarily lighten the ship and cause it to rise. But loss of weight in fuel is compensated for by collecting the water in the exhaust gases, formed by the hydrogen in the gasoline combining with the oxygen of the air in the engines. For 100 pounds of gasoline used there is about 100 pounds of water produced and the weight approximately equalized.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

SILLY PROPAGANDA

(Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph)

One of those numerous organizations which are determined to save the republic from "militarism" if it takes the last dollar in their expense accounts is sending out propagandist literature inviting men to pledge themselves never to participate in any future war.

Any citizen so foolishly disloyal as to sign such a pledge should realize he is promising something that is outside his own volition. The principle of universal service in time of the nation's emergency has now been firmly established. If America should ever again have to go to war, it is probable that mobilization of the nation's resources would be even more nearly complete than in the world conflict and some work would be found for men beyond the age for actual fighting. To work for the abolition of war is a noble thing, but no citizen can say that if his country were attacked he would not fight in its defense. Our nation is not and never has been in danger of "militarism" of being ruled by a great armed force or of raising and maintaining armies for the purpose of combatting militarism in America are not merely unnecessary; they are positively mischievous in their assumption of a peril where none exists, and for this reason should be refused the support of loyal citizens.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

Somebody sees fit to attack the French nation by reason of the conduct of certain of its social elements. This is as unfair as to judge Americans by the character of persons in this country who shock decency by their own lack of it. Such persons are to be found among the rich and poor; where champagne bubbles or moonshine pollutes and poisons.

At Paris races girls were to be seen with shoulders painted to carry out the designs of dresses they wore. A man paraded with a jeweled anklet. Pencil marks supplied him with the semblance of mustache and eyebrows.

Instead of indicting the whole French nation for these displays of idiocy, it is fairer to set the girls down as wantons, and the man as a particularly obnoxious type of fool.

Suppose that one woman did wear her watch fastened to the back of her neck? The drunk, the dissolute and mentally afflicted do strange stunts quite regardless of what people not of their own kind may think of them.

It would be pretty tough on the United States were it to be judged as a whole by a Fatty Arbuckle style of party, or even by such week-end convivialities as a story writers are fond of ascribing to the supposed-to-be socially select of the United States.

The French peasant still is honest and industrious, and the French of every class devoted patriots; excepting of course, the creatures on parade at the races, these not being entitled to classification.

Two persons of no particular consequence get married. The fact hardly is mentioned. Later he spends his money for moonshine, or she smacks him with a skillet, and they decide to quit. They still are of no particular consequence, and yet they are given a column or two next to pure reading matter.

Sometimes it is a little puzzling to know what news is, and why one episode is deemed interesting, and another is not.

An analyst professes to see similarity in the faces of three women guilty of murder or charged with that crime, which is a little unkind to the ones still awaiting a verdict.

However, there is no particular reason for giving weight to the conclusion of people who read character by the physiognomy, but begin by learning of the character from extraneous sources.

People who went to jail because of their active sympathy with the efforts of Germany to destroy this government, are, in some instances, still there. They and their friends repine audibly.

This is quite a valuable government. There is a constitutional privilege of knocking it, but the plan of knocking it clear over, is not to be defended.

July 9 a man committed a double murder near Anaheim. July 19 he was found guilty, the trial lasting from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. and the jury considering the verdict nine minutes.

This is an example of the celerity that should mark all murder trials. In fairness it must be added that had the defendant had money and friends the style of procedure would have been different.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

In our small circle we call him the Beloved Vagabond. Not because he has many of the qualities of Locke's hero, but because he does not work very hard or very constantly, and does not bother about dress and has a quaint sense of humor and an indomitable chivalry that even the ladies themselves cannot destroy.

"I wish you'd help me get my affairs in order," he said the other day. "I might pop off suddenly, you know."

In the doing I made a discovery. The Beloved Vagabond—B. V. in affectionate diminutive—has never worked very hard or earned very much. Neither has he spent unwisely. And his savings, comparatively small as they are, will be sufficient to support him to the end of his days, because the money he saved has all been saved. It has not been thrown overboard in panic or folly. He has bought no gold bricks. No one has ever hooked him on some lovely scheme to manufacture gold-bricks frying pans for the Esquimaux.

"How come?" I asked. "How is it that you have no collection of rotten mining stocks or hum oil stocks or junk railroad stocks, like all the rest of us have? Come in and have a look at my chamber of horrors some time. I'll show you what a condemned fool a wise man can be."

B. V. explained. About the time that he had saved his first $200 a friend came along. The Homestake-Grubstake Amalgamated Placer Mine was to figure in an operation on the New York Curb. The stock was to be boosted suddenly, and as soon as the suckers got aboard the original owners were to sell out. B. V. was offered an opportunity to become an original owner.

The trouble is that B. V. is honest. There was a smell of theft about that proposition. The Homestake-Grubstake never made a peep in the curb market. His friends bought a new car. Two or three widows sold their furniture and found jobs in department store basements.

"I have been on the lookout ever since," said B. V., "and I have not discovered one single proposition in which getting-rich-quick was an element that was not a plain steal. My common sense told me that the plan was to steal from me—not to show me where I could steal from any one else."

B. V.'s deposit isn't so very big, but what is in it is sound and good.

JUST BETWEEN OURSELVES

By DELLA E. STEWART

A heated discussion is going on as to whether women are going to rule the world shortly. A California professor declares that all signs go to show that they will in fifty years or so. Soon after making his ideas public he received the following letter:

"Dear Sir:—As a prophet you would make a good street car conductor. Women rule the world fifty years from now? What are they doing today? You would not have made that statement had you ever seen by wife."

Women are coming to the front rapidly. More than half of our college students are women. Women are gaining a foothold in all professions, including politics; they are meeting in great conventions to plan further effort. The trend of the day is from the fireside to the forum.

But there are exceptions. The woman mayor of a western town recently retired from the position in disgust. "No more politics for me," she declared. Two women a year ago were made members of a city council; this year they refused further nomination. The distinction had lost its charm, the duties of office had been tiresome, the calls of their household insistent. "Politics takes too much of a woman's time," they stated. "We had rather wash dishes than wrangle over paving contracts."

Reactionaries? Maybe. But those there must always be. And these women who put home duties first in life certainly deserve honor. Without well-kept homes the republic would languish. Not all women are fitted for political life, just as all men are not.

There will be other returns from the forum to the fireside as the glamour of new opportunities wears off. The balance of power will be preserved.

MACHINES TANGLE ON HIGHWAYS

The Suburban Realty company, 508 South Brand boulevard, reports $50,000 in sales in South Brand property during the past few weeks. These sales, the company states, came as a result of the rumor that the Pacific Electric tracks are to be lowered and the roadway improved.

Fifty feet of frontage between Chestnut and Maple were sold to a Long Beach capitalist. A 75-foot space was sold to a man from Huntington Beach, who, it is stated, intends erecting an apartment house to cost $30,000 on the property.

One of the lots, a corner, brought $14,000, while the inside lots averaged about $10,000 each.

UNLICENSED, BUT WILLING TO BE

Byron Cale, Warren Millias and Allen D. Johnson were arrested by Glendale police yesterday, charged with selling real estate in this city without licenses. The result was that the boys took out the required licenses and went away smiling.

GILLETTE TENT HOLDS OPEN HOUSE

Entertaining Program Is Given by Daughters of Veterans

The American legion hall was well filled last night when the Mary Jane Gillette tent No. 18, Daughters of Veterans, held open house and entertained during the evening.

A short business session was held, and this was followed by a splendid entertainment which was greatly enjoyed and appreciated by all.

The opening number on the program was community singing, with Mr. Parker at the piano. Mrs. A. J. VanWie then rendered a vocal solo, accompanied on the piano by her small son, Spencer Van Wie. The next number included two piano solos by Miss Rosemary Gilluly. Mrs. R. E. Nern then gave two clever readings, one entitled "Stuttering," causing a great deal of laughter and merriment. Following this, Miss Audrey Haines gave two splendid piano solos, and Mrs. E. B. Moore gave two readings. The closing number was community singing.

Another interesting feature of the evening was an old-fashioned spelling bee. Mr. Parker and C. S. Stuart of the Glendale pharmacy were elected captains, and they chose their teams. E. E. Harwood acted as teacher and the fun began. At the close of about 20 minutes, there was only one member of Mr. Parker's team left, all of Mr. Stuart's having missed and had to take their seats. Miss Ruth Spafford was the winner and she received a box of Kaighan's delicious chocolates.

A rag-rug was given away and Fred Paugh won this. Out-of-town guests of the tent were Ida Hack, Ida McKenley and Mrs. R. E. Liffiton from Denver, Colo., who expect to join this tent.

The Big Film Success, "Sonny," Is Added Attraction

One of the best, highest class vaudeville acts yet presented in Glendale was staged at the T. D. & L. theatre last night, by Ralph Allan. Its unusualness, its rarity, its composition, its cast—all of exceptional merit—were given hearty approval by those who enjoy the best. This act is not the usual humdrum so frequently seen in vaudeville today. Far above it. The cast of players in this sketch, entitled "Oh, Frenchy!" are each and everyone artists of outstanding ability in the realm of the speaking stage. Mlle. Liane Salvor, herself a genuine Parisian actress, is artistic to a very high degree. The supporting players are, too, for that matter, and the entire production is one of excellence.

Besides the sketch there is the Richard Barthelmess production in film, of "Sonny," much heralded as "the most human, lovable picture" ever filmed. Indeed, it is one that goes straight to your heart with its human touch and deep simplicity. It has its comedy moments as well as its dramatic scenes, that punch holes right into your sympathetic bones.

Plan to attend tonight's performance. The vaudeville sketch will be given for the last time tonight, at 8:30 o'clock. You'll get much more than the price of admission out of this wholly high-class entertainment.

What every successful business man knows is that it is easier to build an organization than to hold it. To do the former requires some technical knowledge and executive ability, but the whole works may be destroyed in a day afterward by lack of tact.

Roosevelt Dam was dedicated by President Roosevelt March 18, 1911. The height from lowest foundation is 284 feet, thickness at base 165 feet, and at crest 20 feet. The roadway on top of dam is 16 feet wide. No wonder Little Heap, trade character of the Spreckels "Savage" Tire Company stops to look.

The test of a tire in Arizona is to run it over the Apache Trail. For thirty miles this trail is nothing but rock, and it usually takes around four hours to negotiate that distance. It is not uncommon for tires to wear out completely on a round trip over this road.

Other roads—off the pavement—are nearly as trying. Certainly no weak tire can "stand the gaff" in Arizona.

In our general office files are certified copies of remarkably consistent performance Savage Tires are giving in this territory:

On the Apache Trail

Motorists making frequent trips over the Apache Trail have used Savage Tires in the past three years with unusually satisfactory results.

We have record of Savage Cords, still in operation, making frequent trips over the trail, having exceeded 7000 miles of service, and at that distance showing only 50% wear.

On Stage Lines

Operating between Naco and Bisbee, Arizona, where the road is exceedingly hard and rocky in places, Savage Cords have given service for over 7000 miles. Previous Almost any tire will give satisfactory service under ideal conditions. Some makes will even render satisfactory service under certain adverse conditions. Certain makes of tires will perform best on long drives over pavements, other makes will show to better advantage on dirt highways—and so it goes.

Our object has been to build Savage Tires to to this the operators had never been able to get more than 5000 miles from any tire in this country.

A stage line operating out of Jerome, Arizona, to Camp Verde certifies to averaging over 3000 miles more on Savage Cords than they have been able to get out of any other make of tire.

In Commercial Service

We point with no particular pride to specific performances of over 15,000 miles rendered by our 30 x 3 1/2 fabric tires and our "D" Type fabric tires in commercial service in Phoenix and elsewhere. Although the type of service stamps that performance as really remarkable, these we classify as individual cases and not a general average. They do not necessarily prove the consistency of performance that we are desirous of portraying.

On Territorial Runs

Salesmen traveling particularly difficult roads of Arizona have found Savage Cords will increase their mileage 35% and more.

Corporations traveling men in this territory have certified that Savage Cords are the "only tires that have given satisfactory service."

perform equally well under every condition—on the short haul of the heavily laden commercial car, on the heated roads of the sandy desert, over mud and stones of the land of forests or the broad dirt highways of the plains.

That we have accomplished our purpose is evident from the results users of Savage Tires are getting—everywhere.

TUJUNGA CITIZENS VISIT MISSION PLAY TONIGHT

McGroarty's "Neighbors" to View His Famous
Pageant Tonight

TUJUNGA, July 26. — Through the courtesy of Mrs. John S. McGroarty this evening will be Tujunga night at the Mission play. Over a hundred tickets have been sold at a reduced price, to the "neighbors" by the American Legion post, which is in charge of the excursion.

Special busses will be run to San Gabriel and back for the convenience of those not owning cars. Campaign Starts for Queen

Nominations are now in order for queen of the Moon festival for next year, whose official name is Al Wajunga, star of the moon. Nominations should be sent to George Harris, Tujunga, Calif., who will select three candidates from the names received.

These three will then proceed to collect votes which will run at 100 points for 5 cents. The money raised in this way will be used in the festival expense fund.

Mrs. Mary Deque Smith, who was elected last year will reign as queen of this September's festival.

More Lights Needed on Highway
Petitions asking for five more street lights to be placed along the highway from Cedar street to Haines' canyon road, have been circulated by property owners of that district.

Owing to the distance between the streets which cross the highway that strip, which represents nearly half of Tujunga's business district, has been insufficiently lighted.

Mother—I've washed little brother's shirt and now it's shrunk so that I can't get it on him!
Sister—Well, mama, why don't you try washing brother, then it might fit him all right.

FIRST AUTO GOES TO INDIANA

So far as known, this automobile, built in 1893 by Elwood Haynes, was the first successful car made in America. It established a speed record on July 4, 1894, by going over the Pumpkinville pike, near Kokomo, Ind., at seven miles an hour. Its present home is in the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D. C., and it is here shown on its way back to Indiana to celebrate its 28th birthday, with Congressman Fred S. Purnell of Indiana acting as its escort.

Listening in on Eve

The girl with the purple umbrella and henna colored hat pushed back her plate, on which remained, uneaten, half her luncheon. Then she opened her blue vanity bag, took out her powder puff, and used it.

"Gee," she said, lugubriously, "ain't it awful how things don't never turn out like you want 'em and you don't never seem to get where you quit worrying about 'em? I'll tell the world it is! Honest to Pete, kid, ain't it the limit?"

The other young woman replied appropriately, and the girl with the purple umbrella continued: "Say, dearie, listen a minute. Was any of the fellows over to your place last night? No? 'I just kind of thought maybe somebody—Art, or Jim, or maybe Bert or somebody was over. I just happened to you know, kind of wonder if they was.' 'Ain't it fierce how sometimes you think things is going to turn out, you know, real kind of awful nice, and then they turn out just nothing but a frost? I'll tell the world it is."

"Now you take it about this vanity bag that Ruth, which is one of my sister-in-laws, gave me on my birthday. I guess you know how crazy I was to get one and how I kept telling my folks what kind I wanted, so you'd think they could 'a' bought one in their sleep, and then that Ruth give me this here one without no place for a lipstick."

"Can you beat it? Seemed like even if I hadn't said nothing she'd know enough to get a bag with some conveniences to it even if she didn't know nothing else. I'll tell the world she'd ought to. 'Tell her? Say kid, you'll make me crack my lip in a minute. You're asleep from the neck up. Wait till you get three sister-in-laws like I have and you'll know you don't tell 'em nothing."

"But didn't none of the fellows—Bert, nor nobody—call you up nor anything any time? Not that it makes any difference to me. Bert's actions don't concern me. Ain't it funny how sometimes you feel so kind of happy and everything and other times when you ain't thinking about nothing at all you don't. Gee, ain't it the limit?" "You make it like it was last week when Bert and me was over to your place them couple of times and you and him and me and Art played five hundred and had such a pile of fun; and how I got my new hat and Bert—I mean everybody—thought I looked so good in it and everything and you and me and him and Art went to the movies and saw such a grand show and everything. Wasn't it wonderful? And then you take it like it's been this week and here it is a Friday and seems like there ain't a thing happened and like maybe nothing ain't ever going to, ever."

"Did you say Bert ain't been to your place this week or phoned you nothing? But say, kiddo, if Bert should phone you tonight you ask him if he's mad at me or anything, will you? And you tell him to phone me or something. You tell him I've got something to tell him. Even if Bert don't ring you up, but maybe if Art should come over to your place or even phone you, you tell him to tell Bert I got something."

"Well, when a fellow don't phone you for a whole week or don't come around or anything you kind of feel like you'd ought to find out if he's you know, mad or something."

"He has? Well, ain't you awful to keep kidding me along like that when you knew all the time—say, girlie, who told you he was out of the city?"

"Well, I should think if he had time to phone his sister he'd 'a' had time to ring me up—"

"Well, I should think he could phone me while she was packing his grip—not that there was any reason for him phoning me, only he kind of said he'd be over to our place this week and I kind of, you know, thought—"

"She was? Well, gee, I'm glad she's getting well. Bert'd just about croak if his mother should, you know, not get well or anything. He's just crazy about her."

"And, say, kiddo, listen. I guess I'm real kind of glad he didn't phone me. I think it's just grand for a guy to think so much of his ma. Fellows like that are always real grand to their wives."

"Ain't you terrible? I never said a thing. But, say, dearie, you won't mind if I don't wait till you get through eating, will you? I guess I better beat it back to the awful and phone Bert. If he got back this morning like you say, he'll think it's awful funny if I didn't phone him right off to find out how his mother is."

TACT

A story is told of how Greys, when French president, once extricated himself from a predicament with wonderful presence of mind. He was being conducted round the salon of an eminent artist, when he saw a painting that displeased him.

"What a daub!" he exclaimed. "Whose is it?" "That picture, M. le President," said the artist, "is my own work." "Ah!" said the president, without any sign of embarrassment at his awkward mistake. "In our country when we particularly wish to purchase a thing, we always begin by running it down," and true to his part, he purchased the offending picture there and then.—Los Angeles Times.

BRAINS NOT CONSIDERED

"I'm your man. I have one of the qualifications."

"Oh, indeed? I didn't know you had money."

THE NEWS OF YESTERDAY

JAMES W. FOLEY

The daily paper comes to me
Still damp from form and ink and press,
I look the columns through to see
What is the great world's business.
The busy world that throbs with strife
And love and hate and work and play,
But short and tense the way of life,
For where's the news of yesterday?

The statesman struts his little round,
The sage, the emperor and king,
And somewhere in the world the sound
Of speech and tumult echoing,
And then, the twinkling of an eye,
The actors in the passing play
Grow old, the great parade goes by—
Where is the news of yesterday?

There was the sound of hate and war,
And men in trenches bled and died;
The echo of great cannon tore
The stillness over fields so wide,
We read the news with staring eyes
And hearts grown weary on the way
Of blood and tears and anguished cries—
Where is the news of yesterday?

The fool who held the center stage
Because like any fool he died;
The men and women on the page
Before my eyes; the murder cried
By shouting newsboys in the street,
All like the actors in a play,
The curtain falls, the scene complete—
Where is the news of yesterday?

The busy world still throbs and hums,
New scenes set forth upon the stage
The wealth of new sensation comes
To have its place upon the page.
The fool, the wise, the high, the low,
They bow and strut and pass away—
Like leaves that in the Autumn blow—
Where is the news of yesterday?
